A slight interruption in train service on the W. M. Ry. occurred Friday evening which delayed the evening trains. When the down train started at Brush Run, the sudden jolt caused the coupling between the tender and passenger car to break. With the aid of a chain the passenger car was towed to the siding and then switched about in front of the engine and thus propelled the remainder of the journey. This maneuver required about a half hour and tied up traffic on the Lincoln Highway for a considerable time.

FIRE IN HANOVER STORE

About 5 o'clock Friday evening fire of a mysterious origin was discovered in the cellar of the clothing store of Paul E. Sell, Hanover, by Robert Emswiler. The damage caused by the fire was confined to the first floor joists and was not considerable, but Mr. Sell's entire stock of furnishings has been badly smoked, which will mean a heavy loss. The proprietor had locked up the store at 5 o'clock and had left for home with his clerk, Walter McKinney. Mr. Sell, who is also secretary of the Hanover Building & Loan Assn., asserted that no person was in the cellar Friday

CHASES MOTHER WITH KNIFE

Francis A. Emmons, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Emmons, Gettysburg, will serve a term at the Phoenixville Catholic reformatory for an assault and battery attempt on his mother, Edith A. Emmons, Friday afternoon. Francis, it is alleged, in addition to striking his mother with his fists, cursed her thru the house and out into the yard with a butcher knife. The State police were notified and private Couchner arrested the boy. During the morning, it is said, Francis had been playing with other boys in the yard behind his home. The game was of the "wild west" variety and Francis struck several of his playmates knocking them to the ground during the game. They soon deserted him and he then made his assault upon his mother. His father was formerly chief of police in Gettysburg but is now a railroad worker and was away from home at the time of the alleged assault upon his wife. Francis was hailed before Justice Hill and after a preliminary hearing at which his mother appeared against him, was held under $100 bail for his appearance at court. In default of bail, he was committed to jail. In court his mother took the witness stand against her son and testified to his incorrigibility. She told the court how he swore at her on the street when with company and abused her at home on numerous occasions. The court then called the boy to a chair beside him on the bench and questioned him concerning his conduct. Sheriff Hartman, who had the boy under his care one night, testified that he was one of the worst boys he had ever seen.

PHYSICIAN SUED

FOR $10,631.50 DAMAGE

Claiming $10,631.50 damages, a suit was entered Monday against Dr. W. F. Bacon, York, in the office of Prothonotary Snyder by Brenda K. Badders, a minor, by her father, Harry M. Badders, of Littlestown, and by the latter, in his own right. It is claimed that the doctor failed to properly set a leg broken at Abbotstown sometime ago in an auto accident, and $10,000 is sought by the girl for loss of time, physical pain, mental anguish, privation, inconvenience, temporary disfigurement and lameness. The father claims $631.50 for loss of his daughter's service, hospital expenses, medicines and treatments, surgical operations, and other expenses. The girl, it is claimed, following her discharge by Dr. Bacon as cured, went through additional operation and treatment by Dr. George S. Bennett, at the Church Home and Infirmary, Baltimore, and as a result was permanently cured.

NIGHT TRIP IN BLIZZARD

At the height of the blizzard on Saturday night Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbotstown, was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Menchey, 3 miles from Hanover, along Carlisle pike. The Stork was racing for the house and the doctor was confronted by no mean task. Ten or twelve men met the doctor in the Pigeon Hills where he was stuck in a snow drift with his automobile. Reaching the house just one jump ahead of The Stork Dr. Miller was present at the birth of a boy baby. After midnight the doctor left on the return trip, accompanied by the gang of men and, after a three hours fight with the storm, reached his home. Time and again huge drifts blocked the way and the doctor's car was shoveled out, only to become stuck again. The distance covered one way was little more than three miles, it is said.

CHILD DIES FROM BURNS

After hovering between life and death four days, during which time he suffered untold agonies as the result of burns received when playing with paper about a stove, Monday a week, Donald F. Barnhart, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Barnhart, Gettysburg, died in the Warner hospital Friday evening. Flames he had inhaled were the cause of his death. The accident which led to his death occurred when Mrs. Barnhart sent the little fellow upstairs to get a dress for his younger sister. He was gone a few minutes when he came rushing downstairs screaming and into the arms of his mother with his clothing ablaze. Two younger sisters and the parents survive. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, the Rev. Fr. Stock officiating.

Attention is called to the borough statement which appears in this issue. The indebtedness, which last year was 13,759, has been reduced to $11,606—a praiseworthy accomplishment. Two big improvements last year were the piking of Pleasant street and the furnishing of an adequate water supply to the Livingston shoe factory. More success to the local authorities in 1922!

Come and see the Durant car—It is now here, at the New Oxford Garage. J. F. Miller & R. M. Wolf.

WM. G. WEAVER BECOMES

PARTNER WITH FATHER

William G. Weaver, son of H. T. Weaver, Monday became a partner in the dry goods department store, Gettysburg, conducted under the firm name of G. W. Weaver & Son, Mr. Weaver was graduated from Gettysburg college in the class of 1921 and since June has been associated with his father in the business. He will continue in the capacity of assistant manager and advertising manager. G. W. Weaver, the new member's grandfather, and H. T. Weaver opened business in their present location in April, 1885, in a small room, 28x38 feet, with a partition dividing the space into two parts. Success came quickly and they immediately enlarged the store. In 1903 the firm bought the building of the late Cassius Neely, giving the additional room as now used, making a selling floor space of 10,000 square feet. Since the death of the senior member of the firm in 1914, the business has been directed entirely by H. T. Weaver, who now announces the association of his son with him in the firm. Through the efforts of the members of the firm and the liberal use of advertising the business has grown steadily from year to year until now their store is the largest of its kind in Adams county.

JURY DECIDES FOR KRUG

After deliberation of about 2½ hours, Thursday, the jury selected to hear the suit brot by G. M. Krug, of Littlestown, against James Murren, near McSherrytown, returned verdict awarding Krug $513.25. This sum includes the purchase price of the tractor of $400 which Krug sold Murren and for which he took his note and also the interest on the money since 1920. Murren, it is said, refused to meet the note upon its maturity whereupon Krug entered the note for judgment. A stay was granted Murren against the execution of the judgment. At the time he signed the note Murren stated that it was not a promissory note he was signing but merely a bill of sale.

TRUCK STATION HERE

In the near future there will be held a free meeting in New Oxford backed by a Philadelphia company in the interest of a proposed truck route from Arendtsville via Biglerville, Gettysburg and the Lincoln Highway to Philadelphia. This place will be on the line of the route and the promoters want all the farmers and others to be with them. Nathaniel C. Miller is helping to get the meeting in this place. The plan will likely put some more business in the town as the promoters will want a produce house, slaughter house, milk station and fruit shed for packing ready for shipment as all apples will be boxed. The company will start with three heavy trucks and three trailers and the bodies of the trailers will be refrigerated so that they can haul all kinds of perishable goods in the very hottest weather and make safe delivery. All produce will be bought for cash and paid for on delivery to the station, excepting milk as that will have to be tested first before they can make out the bills, and if farmers are in need of cash they can get that on account which will be the same as cash. The object of this company is to get away from the clutches of the middlemen and jobbers and sell direct to the consumers in Philadelphia through their own stores and in this way they can allow the farmer more and give the consumer a share of the gain through this transaction which will be appreciated by all parties. The whole cost of running a truck and a trailer for 125 miles is $54.30 and out of this the trailer only costs $7.02 and the truck $47.28, the promoters claim. The company will teach the farmer how to take care of produce, all eggs will be candied before shipment and all losses will be taken off of the careless parties. The company proposes to do all their own killing and cure all meat and will make their own sausage and scraple.

107 KILLED WHEN ROOF FALLS

One hundred and seven persons lost their lives in the collapse Saturday night of the snow-laden roof of the Knickerbocker motion picture theatre in Washington. The list of injured stands at 134, with 14 listed as "seriously injured." All the dead have been identified. The large majority of the victims, both killed and injured, were residents of that city, although many came recently from other places. A few more than 300 were in the audience that was roaring in laughter at a filmed comedy when the roof fell on them like a blanket, carrying down the front of the wide balcony in its crash.

William I. Bikle, Jr., 46, and his daughter, Miss Frances Bikle, 14, were among those who lost their lives in the Knickerbocker motion picture theatre in Washington on Saturday night. Mr. Bikle was a former resident of Gettysburg and a brother of Mrs. Warren Gilbert and nephew of Dr. P. M. Bikle, dean of Gettysburg college. The deceased is survived by another daughter, Katherine, of Washington, also six sisters. Mr. Bikle married Miss Laura Kinser, of Gettysburg, about 22 years ago, and she preceded him in death 8 years ago, being buried in Gettysburg. More than 20 years ago he left Gettysburg and went to the National Capital. Mr. Bikle and daughters were guests last summer of Mrs. Mary Crane, of the Pfaltzgraff apartments, McSherrytown.

The scene of the accident is said to have been only a short distance from the homes of the Hon. Jos. H. Himes and Mrs. Geo. N. Acker, both formerly of New Oxford. Friends of Mr. Himes and Mrs. Acker were numbered among the victims.

$125 FOR YEAR'S SERVICE

Thru the interest of Mrs. Kate W. Himes, Center Square, we learn that the late Dr. Pfeiffer, New Oxford's first postmaster, came to this place in 1821 and was commissioned postmaster in 1822. His pay for the first three months was seven cents, and the entire year netted him $1.25 instead of $125 as appeared in this paper last week. Dr. Pfeiffer in 1824 was commissioned a Justice of the Peace and served for 17 years. History tells us that Dr. Pfeiffer was one of the most highly cultured residents of Pennsylvania. The older residents of town recall clearly the scholarly looking old gentleman.

BLANCHE BLAIR

THAT Taulac is a wonderful medicine for delicate children is conclusively proven by the remarkable results accomplished in the cases of the three children shown in this picture.

Little Blanche Blair, of Providence, R. I., age 13, gained 10 pounds; Regina McCabe, at right, age 9, of Scranton, Pa., gained 15 pounds; little Richard Leary, Jr., of Philadelphia, who was very delicate, is now in fine, robust health. The statements made by their parents are as follows:

Mr. A. M. Blair, residing at 20 Atwood street, Providence, R. I., said: "We are just so happy over the change Taulac has made in our little girl that we can't do or say enough to show our appreciation. She had lost nearly 20 pounds in weight and looked so frail and weak that her mother and I were both almost worried sick over her condition. Since taking Taulac, she has already gained 10 pounds, her color is better than it ever has been and she looks and acts like a different girl."

Mrs. Catherine McCabe, 414 Dickens Ave., Scranton, Pa., said: "The 'du' left my little Regina in such a bad condition that I have no idea she would be with me now if it hadn't been for Taulac. It is a mystery to me how she lived on the little she was eating and was so lifeless she never even cared to play with the dolls and toys she got at Christmas. Since taking Taulac she is as hearty and well as any child could be and has gained 15 pounds in weight. I will always praise Taulac for restoring our little girl's health."

Richard Leary, 2342 Palmyra St., Philadelphia, said: "There is no doubt in my mind but that Taulac saved my little boy's life. For two years I wouldn't have been a bit surprised to have seen him drop off at any time. He had stomach trouble and many a time the gas pressed up into his chest until his heart palpitated so I thought sure he couldn't breathe but a few more gasps. But Taulac gave him back to us strong and well and we will praise it to our dying day."

The effect of Taulac on the delicate stomachs of the young is one of the strongest evidences of its wholesomeness as well as its unusual merit. Although a powerful reconstructive, Taulac contains no harmful ingredients, minerals or opiates which are so often found in other medicines. Being composed of the most beneficial roots and herbs known to science it is purely vegetable and can be taken by the most delicate children, and does not upset or injure the weakest or most delicate stomach.

A "balanced diet" may sound confusing to many people

The facts, as explained here, are simple.

The secret of a "balanced diet" is to have food containing all the elements needed for proper nutrition. These elements are protein, to nourish the tissues; starch and sugar to furnish energy; fat to supply heat; and mineral salts to provide the material necessary for building nerves, brain, and tooth and bone structure.

Grape-Nuts, the nourishing cereal made of whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with cream or milk, is a complete food for young and old alike.

Go to your grocer today and get a package of Grape-Nuts. Eat it with milk or cream for breakfast; or with stewed fruit, jelly or jam, as a delicious dessert for lunch or dinner.

Every member of the family will relish this palatable and nourishing food—

HORSE IS FOND OF MOTORCARS

Chewing of Detective's Car Wins New Summons for Licenseless Peddler.

New York.—Were all the horses in New York endowed with the genius that characterizes Nero, who works for Maurice Kelly, peddler, there would be fewer motorcars about.

Detective Walter J. Coffey is attached to the Oak Street station. Because he lives in Flatbush he employs a flivver to ride to duty.

The other night he parked the flivver in front of the Oak Street station house. Right here is where Nero, peddler's horse, comes in. He was parked a few minutes later directly back of the flivver.

Endowed with the identical passion that prompted his namesake to burn Rome, and propelled, perhaps, by a whim to institute general war against the machines that have all but put him and his likes out of business. Nero commenced to tear the leather out of Officer Coffey's car with his teeth and to scatter upholstery amid the snowflakes.

This process continued until Nero was spied from the window by Officer Coffey. What Officer Coffey said to Nero is not recorded. Neither is any mention made of the speech which Officer Coffey made to Peddler Kelly when he arrived five minutes later.

In the course of this harangue, however, it became a matter of suspicion to the detective that Kelly, who lives at No. 918 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, was plying his trade without a license.

Here, indeed, was heart balm! Officer Coffey handed Peddler Kelly a summons. And as the two men mounted their respective vehicles, preparatory to altered parking arrangements, a third dissertation delighted the ears of the bystanders.

This one was addressed by Peddler Kelly to his horse.

STEALS TO GET INTO JAIL

Twice Refused Lodging, Man Takes Pencils and Asks Arrest in Goshen, N. Y.

Goshen, N. Y.—J. H. Guy, a prisoner in the Orange county jail, stole two pencils, according to the authorities, to get into custody after he had been refused lodging at two jails. Guy was out of work and needed food and rest.

Guy asked Policeman David Clark for a night's lodging in the Goshen jail. Refused, he went to the Orange county jail, only to be turned down again. The authorities allege he left, saying he would force them to care for him, went to Conklin's coal office, forced an entrance, and violated the law technically by taking only two pencils.

Then, seeking a policeman, Guy said he had broken the law, and demanded he be arrested. He was held for the grand jury.

Guy is the most contented prisoner Sheriff W. M. Leonard has in his calaboose.

Automobile Mirror as a New Flirtation Aid

Los Angeles, Cal.—Now comes the rear sight automobile mirror as the latest vehicle for flirtation. Mrs. Hattie Webb of Los Angeles introduced the mirrors in her testimony when she sought a divorce, alleging that Mrs. Babe Eberlee always sat in the back seat of her husband's automobile and flirted with Mr. Webb. The husband did not contest the case and Mrs. Webb was granted a divorce and the custody of the two children.

Corn Shredder Severs Man's Hands. Lewistown, Pa.—Cecil Richardson lost both hands when he attempted to free one hand that had been caught in a corn shredder which he was operating on his father's farm. Richardson was wearing gloves, and these held his hands after they had been caught in the cogs.

WILD MAN LIVES ALONE IN CAVE

Makes Night Raids on Neighboring Farms and Carries Away Animals.

FIGHTS WITH HUNTERS

Won Hand-to-Hand Encounter With Man Who Battled Him in His Cave in Effort to Win Reward.

Mt. Sterling, Ill.—A wild man, living in a cave near here, is thwarting all efforts of police and armed citizens to capture him and is keeping the countryside in terror with his raids on outlying farms. A price has been set on his head, but desperate attempts to capture him in his lair have proved vain.

The wild man recently made a series of bold robberies near Mt. Pleasant, carrying off calves and sheep to a deserted mine where he stays hidden in the daytime. Ambrose Smith, a dead shot and a tireless hunter, was seriously wounded in a terrific hand-to-hand encounter with the mysterious man-monster.

is Huge Creature With Bony Hands. "The wild man has long, wiry hair that bristles about his savage-looking face," Smith said in his home, where he is recovering from the adventure. "In the uncertain light of the cavern, I made him out to be a great towering creature. His hands are thin and the flesh is stretched over the bones like leather."

People feared black damp in the long empty galleries of the mine so much that even a reward of $300 for the wild man, dead or alive, failed to result in his apprehension. At last Smith, accompanied by J. M. Blair and others from Mt. Pleasant, all quick with a gun, went to the cave. It was late in the afternoon. Smith had the others stand back 200 yards from the mouth of the cave and entered alone, armed only with his large hunting knife. His dog followed him.

Fought for Hour in Damp Cave.

Night fell and the watchers waited in vain for Smith's return. Then there was a great noise and the dog ran out whimpering. The men went into the cavern in search of Smith. They groped along through the twisting passageways in the darkness, but were unable to find any trace of him. At midnight Smith crawled from the cave on his hands and knees and fell faint and exhausted at the feet of his friends.

"I did not get more than 50 feet into the cave boys," he said, as they carried him to the doctors. "when I saw the wild man glaring at me a few feet away. Then he sprang at me and held me in his steel-like grip. I tried to knife him but he held my wrist. For more than an hour we fought together on the wet floor of the cave. "I weakened and he slipped from my grip. I felt his hot breath on my face and then a heavy blow on my head knocked me unconscious. I don't know what happened after that. When I get well I'll make another attempt, and next time I'll get him."

HER FACE TORTURES SLAYER

Murdered Girl's Image Forced Man to Confess Choking Her and Throwing Her in Pool.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Declaring his soul was tortured by a vision of a "face which is with me night and day," George Christman, a prisoner here, has confessed to officers that he murdered Leona Mayfield of New York city August 11.

Christman strangled the girl with a necktie while they were riding in an automobile with an ex-convict, according to his story. The two men threw her body into a pool when they saw she was dead, he said.

New York city police report that the body of a woman had been found in the pool Christman mentioned. Christman is being held for a violation of the state motor vehicle law. He will be sent to New York city if his story is confirmed.

The Post's Business.

The duty of the post is like unto that of the naturalist; it is to pursue and capture those rare specimens of thought that have hitherto escaped the hunter's net; incase in crystal-clear diction these captive beauties of nature; and offer them, 'mid the wild-flowers of their native haunts, for the admiration, reverence and love of all mankind.

A black satchel containing $55,000 in cash was found on the seat of a Paris omnibus one morning recently, writes a correspondent. It had been forgotten by a bank messenger, who was greatly relieved to find that the conductor of the omnibus had duly delivered it to the lost property office, where it lay among umbrellas and odd gloves awaiting reclamation.

Mothers—You should carefully guard your daughter's health. Advise her of the danger which comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, or overworking. Do not let her overstudy.

If she complains of headache, pains in back or lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, give her careful attention.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for your daughter to take, as it is especially adapted to relieve just such symptoms. Remember it contains nothing that can injure and can be taken in safety.

Making Good an Old Boast.
A process has been discovered whereby old leather can be converted into gelatin. Such transformation offers a ready way of utilizing many articles after their value to every one but the junk man appears to be gone. Since head coverings are sometimes made of leather, it would appear that at least the man confident that his candidature will win in an election may literally back up his confidence with the time-honored promise that he will eat his hat in the event that his man loses.

UNMUSICALLY INCLINED

"You mustn't become discouraged about your son's practicing. You know, Paganini, the great violinist, would practice a whole day on a single bar."
"Well, my son, does the same thing, but he doesn't show any improvement that I can notice."
"That is strange."
"Yes, but I think the trouble is he picks out a bar made up entirely of rests on which to practice."

"Because, ma'am, I never get more than a nickel out of people like you."

A Strategic Advantage.

"I'm thinking of asking Mr. Wadleigh for a loan. How had I better go about it?"

Help Your Kidneys Fight That Cold!

Winter Colds and Chills Weaken the Kidneys and Are the Direct Cause of Many Serious Kidney Disorders

Is winter-time your backache-time? Does every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day?

Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. They overload the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys have to filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder then, that every cold

finds you suffering with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities.

But don't worry! Simply realize that your kidneys are overworked at such times and need assistance. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills today and give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Assist them also by drinking pure water freely, eating lightly, and getting plenty of fresh air and rest. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

L. W. COX, Westover, Md., says: "My kidneys were weak for a long time. I had backaches and such a soreness across my kidneys I couldn't bend or stoop. Colds settled on my kidneys and I also had bladder trouble. I doctored for some time and was told I would have to have one of my kidneys taken out. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I used them. They relieved all signs of the trouble."

MRS. WALKER CAMPBELL, 707 Pendleton St., Alexandria, Va., says: "A cold settled in my kidneys. I had such pains I could hardly catch my breath sometimes. When I bent it was hard to straighten, the pain was so bad. My kidneys acted very irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. Though that was over two years ago, I have had no return of kidney trouble."

You are entitled to the benefit of the doubt. Why not take advantage of it?

The law is very careful in protecting the rights of a prisoner charged with a crime.

How about the Law of Common Sense and the man who has committed an error only? Isn't this a good place to use the benefit of the doubt, too?

Take your own case: If you don't know for sure whether tea or coffee is harming you, you do know that many are harmed by the drug element in tea and coffee, and that headaches, nervousness, or high blood pressure are symptoms which often tell that the drug, caffeine, is giving the nervous system too much jolt.

Probably you know, too, that some people can't drink a cup of tea or coffee at bed-time, and sleep well that night.

Where many have been harmed by tea and coffee, and you may be harmed, isn't it well to put the benefit of the doubt on your side before doubt becomes an unpleasant certainty?

AWARDED $10,000 DAMAGES

A verdict of $10,000 was awarded Robert E. Sheads, of Gettysburg, against Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads, by a jury in the Adams county court Wednesday after deliberating an hour as the result of an automobile accident at the High street crossing of the P. RR. in Hanover on December 20, 1918. Sheads was in a party going from Gettysburg to Hanover to witness a basketball game. The car in which they were riding was struck by a locomotive and Sheads, who was alone in the rear seat, had his right arm so badly injured that amputation was necessary. He was forced to abandon his intention of becoming a civil engineer. The other members of the party, J. M. Bender, the driver, and Guy Beard, escaped serious injury.

Upon hearing the verdict, Charles Kain, of the law firm of Cochran, Williams & Kain, York, entered a motion for a new trial. The court will allow them time to file the motion and if refused, the case will be appealed to the Superior court, it is believed.

Sheds, who has been taking a post-graduate course in education at Gettysburg College, in preparation to teaching, will continue until his graduation in June.

MOTHER THROWS OUT OIL STOVE

A narrow escape from death or serious injury to a mother and two small children by fire occurred Thursday at the home of George Myers, residing along the Lincoln Highway, below Farmers. Mrs. Myers with her two-days' old baby was lying in bed in at upstairs room and her 4-year-old son Paul was playing alongside a coal oil stove which was used to heat the apartment, when the boy accidentally upset the stove which burst into flames. As Mr. Myers and his sister were in the barn doing the morning's milking, the mother, with great courage and presence of mind, arose from bed, and snatching up the blazing stove carried it down the flight of steps and threw it out of doors. When Dr. Eugene Elgin, East Berlin, her attending physician, called at the home a short time after the incident, he found Mrs. Myers none the worse, outside of fright, from her adventure.

An interesting operation in skin-grafting was performed at the Warner hospital Thursday on Edw. McSherry, of Gettysburg. A wound which he received sometime ago while working at the Oyler & Spangler fertilizer plant, east of Gettysburg, never healed and skin-grafting was resorted to. The sore is on his left leg and skin was taken from another part of his body. About three square inches were used in the operation.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Newadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delight the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Drenst Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus driving a cold from the system.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB BACKACHE AND LUMBAGO RIGHT OUT

Rub Pain and Stiffness away with a small bottle of old honest St. Jacobs Oil

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 35 cent bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into the pain or ache, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the ache and pain right out of your back and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly!

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Menthio-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Menthio-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

W. N. HULICK,

Carlisle Street,

'CAUSE HE LOVED HER SO

Burning love messages sent to Mrs. Levi D. Rife, of Gettysburg, sent by Constable Christian W. Yingst, of Middletown, were the basis of the evidence in the suit brought in the Dauphin county court Wednesday by Levi D. Rife alleging alienation of his wife's affections by the Middletown officer of the law. The jury Thursday returned a verdict of $1,000 in favor of Mr. Rife, the plaintiff. Eight love notes in all were presented by Mr. Rife. He alleged they were written by Mr. Yingst to his wife. Yingst maintained he had only a speaking acquaintance with Mrs. Rife, and wrote but one letter to her. He is a widower with grown children. Mrs. Rife is in her thirties.

The salutations in the letters varied from "Dear Friend" to "Dear, My Only Nellie." In one of them, which Rife's lawyer, James G. Hatz, characterized as "soft and mushy," Yingst sent a "standpipe full of kisses," and in another he offered "a million tons of kisses." Those in the courtroom giggled as the lawyer read the first of the letters, which said in part: "I want to pay for that divorce; I can hardly be without you. Just think of it, the one I love is 58 miles away from me." Tipstaves had to rap for order when the attorney read: "The violet is red, the rose is blue and I have a kiss for you." In the second letter the attorney quoted Yingst as writing: "I could hardly leave you yesterday; I wish you could be with me, 'cause I love you so. Don't forget to go to town and see about the divorce."

A Judicious Inquiry.—A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade, says he has often heard druggists ask a customer, who wished to buy a cough medicine, whether it was for a child or an adult and if for a child, they almost invariably recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it and for colds, croup and whooping cough it is unsurpassed.

BROTHERS ARE BURGESSES
William R. Thomas, Jr., of Catasauqua, and his brother, John W. Thomas, of Littlestown, who were the successful candidates for the office of burgess in two widely separated Pennsylvania towns, recently assumed office. The former is a banker and has mapped out a big program for civic betterment. The latter is manager of the Littlestown Silk Company, and is expected to give that borough one of the most efficient and business-like administrations it has ever had. Outside of inspector of elections he was the only successful Republican at the November election.

NO REST—NO PEACE
There's no peace and little rest for the one who suffers from a bad back, and distressing urinary disorders. People around here recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor. Be guided by their experience.

Mrs. Mary A. Gilbert, 150 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "My health was in a bad condition for some time, caused by disordered kidneys. I wasn't able to sleep much and what rest I got didn't seem to refresh me. My back and head ached and frequently I'd get dizzy spells and chills. When I caught cold, these symptoms became worse. One of the family advised me to get Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought a supply. Doan's certainly do just as advertised, for they gave me prompt relief in every way."

OVER SIX YEARS LATER. Mrs. Gilbert added: "My opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills hasn't changed and I can, therefore, recommend them as highly as ever. I gladly back up my former statements."

The Adams county supervisors convention will be held at Court House, in Gettysburg, February 8th at 10:30. W. O. Lerew, of Latimore township, unfortunately had his smokehouse catch fire and burn the meat of three hogs.

Leonard Davis has rented the Chas. Leas farm, near York Springs, for the coming year. Mr. Leas expects to move to Hanover.

E. B. Lau, of East Berlin, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the Assembly from Adams county.

P. P. Lerew, who has been conducting a garage in East Berlin for a number of years, has taken C. E. Smith in as a partner.

Mrs. Louisa Rickrode, widow of the late Franklin Rickrode, York Springs, has been granted a widow's pension with back pay amounting to $412.88.

The Littlestown Green Grocery, Geo. A. Bixler, Mgr., have purchased the good will and fixtures of the H. W. Martin store, Littlestown, and are now open for business.

The merchants of Littlestown have agreed to close their places of business, beginning February 1st, every evening at 6 o'clock excepting Monday and Saturday evenings.

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Littlestown council Thursday evening, Amos Miller was chosen water pumper. He succeeds Irvin Null who has been serving temporarily.

William B. Flemming, a member of the State Highway department office force Gettysburg, had a bone in his right fore arm fractured recently, when the car he was cranking back-fired.

The partnership subsisting between W. Raymond Group and Fuhrman H. Chronister, under the name of the York Springs Garage, was dissolved on January 19th. Mr. Group is continuing the business.

Carl Stone, 29 years, ended his life Monday, at New Cumberland, when he shot himself in the head with a 38-calibre revolver. Stone had been in ill health. Next week, he, his wife of less than a year, and his son, were going to move to Mechanicsburg.

Miss Lucy Danner, who has been employed for over 13 years in the Gladfelter sewing factory, Abbottstown, has noted many changes. Of the 35 girls that started in, 22 are married, death claimed 2 and some went to other places of employment.

J. R. Hartman, Clerk of the Courts, granted only 12 marriage licenses during January. This month is the lowest for a number of months. In January 1921, the clerk issued 17 licenses. June and December are the months when most licenses are issued.

Edward Bentzel, 64, of Weigels-town, a Dover township supervisor and prominent farmer, was found dead Tuesday morning in the kitchen of his home, by his son, William, who lives in a house adjoining that of his father. Two brothers and a sister survive.

Sweeping over the entire East and Middle Atlantic states, the blizzard which had its inception in the South, struck Adams county about 3 o'clock Saturday morning and raged without a break for 26 hours. In its wake the storm left stalled trains, disrupted trolley service, snowbound farms and hamlets, impassable roads—all buried in drifts of white, massed as a formidable barrier to travel of every kind. Church services in the rural districts were abandoned. The snowfall here amounted to 14 inches. The storm was described by the weather bureau as the worst in 23 years.

An angry witness, angry attorneys, heated words and the rebuke of the Court, marked the hearing Wednesday morning of the case in which Mrs. Phoebe Shelly and George Albert, each bequeathed $5, are attempting to have the power of executrix, held by Miss Marie C. Shenk, of the will of Sampson Albert, their brother, set aside. Albert died at the home of Miss Shenk in Carlisle, on September 1, 1921, leaving an estate valued at $50,000 to Miss Shenk. Justice Boyer, of Carlisle, a witness for the defense, testified Miss Shenk dictated the entire will and all its clauses. Mr. Boyer told of Miss Shenk going back and forth endeavoring to have Mr. Albert recall the name of his sister and of the aged man replying "I don't care" to the questions regarding how much he wished to give to his brother and sister, and to John Duncan, an employee, who received $1000.

LAPHAM SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR IN "PEN"

J. Costella Lapham, of East Berlin, formerly of Hanover, Saturday in the Adams county court was sentenced to solitary confinement in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than 1½ months, nor more than 12 months. The sentence was imposed on the charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons. Sentence was suspended on three charges of assault and battery and aggravated assault and battery, on which he was also convicted. The cost of the trial was placed on him. Before Lapham was sentenced District Attorney R. F. Topper told the court that the prisoner had a bad record in York county, there being counts recorded against him there on charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and of being a common gambler. Lapham has been taken to Philadelphia.

Iven C. Sentz who passed three bad checks on Gettysburg merchants was ordered back to jail for an additional three months; pay $20 fines and the cost of the prosecution. In addition to the general sentence, Sentz was given 10 days in jail for each of the three charges against him and pay fines for each of the counts of $5 and costs of the trials.

John Fletcher, operator of the moonshine whiskey still under the Eagle hotel lobby, smiled upon the court when the judge sentenced him to 4 months in jail, a fine of $100 and the costs of the prosecution.

William Snyder, who stole two pistols from Curtis Shultz several months ago and who has been in jail for the past four months, was given three more in the county jail and ordered to pay the costs of the trial.

Sentence was suspended on Albert Vaughn, charged with felony, and Harry Smith, who owed a small board bill, until February 1.

Mrs. Annie Angel, of Hanover, lost her case against N. L. Minter, Gettysburg, to recover the truck which Mr. Minter purchased from her son, Ralph. The jury was out two hours before reaching a verdict. It was shown by the testimony that the car had never been registered by Mrs. Angel and that the act of her son was bona fide.

The non-support case of Mrs. Earl A. Swope, of Gettysburg, against her husband, Earl A. Swope, of Aspers, was settled by the court by awarding Mrs. Swope $5.60 a week for her support and that of her child. The court made the payments to start from December 1, 1921.

The jury selected to hear the suit brought by Edward L. Gebhart against Alex. H. Rebert, both of near Gettysburg, Saturday, was compelled to return to the jury room after returning one verdict in which certain interest asked by the plaintiff had not been figured. After being out several minutes they returned a verdict awarding Gebhart the sum of $306.48 which was the amount of his claim and the interest since 1919. The suit grew out of a dispute about wages which Rebert agreed to pay Gebhart but which were never forthcoming. Gebhart brought action to recover the sum due and the interest.

Clarence Carson, 14, and Albert Warren, 16, both of Pountaindale, who were arrested November 8 for disturbing a religious meeting near that hamlet, were released on parole, with the admonition that they behave themselves in places of worship in the future.

For the first time in a large number of terms the court of the Quarter Sessions lasted until 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Most of the long-standing suits were brought before the court and settled. The session transacted much important business and cleared several important cases.

LIQUOR AND GASOLINE

While returning from York Friday afternoon driving a large coupe belonging to M. C. Jones, general manager of the Gettysburg Furniture companies, which Mr. Jones purchased just three weeks ago, William Reed, Gettysburg, lost control of the machine on the Lincoln Highway a short distance east of that town, causing it to turn over and skid along the road on its side for over 50 feet. Mr. Reed who was alone in the car at the time was uninjured. Mr. Jones gave the car to Mr. Reed, an employee in the furniture factory, early in the afternoon to take a friend to York and return. While in York, it is said, Mr. Reed indulged in a few drinks of intoxicating liquor and after the accident appeared still under the influence of the drinks he had. Later Mr. Reed was arrested by the State police on the charge of driving a car while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Mr. Jones furnished bail for his release. The car was badly damaged. Following a hearing before Justice Hill Monday afternoon, Reed was released under $300 bail for his appearance at the April term of the Quarter Sessions. Mr. Jones furnished the necessary bail.

Frederick Winand, York Springs' oldest citizen, celebrated his 92nd birthday anniversary on Sunday. Mr. Winand was born and reared in that community and lived all of his long and useful life there with the exception of several months spent at Altoona where he assisted in erecting the third house constructed in that town in 1840, working at the carpentering trade and receiving 82 cents per day. Robert C. Spangler, of near Hagersburg, has had a Bell telephone installed at his residence, 32 R12, Gettysburg, R7.

TAX FOR NEW LIBRARY

The Adams County Library Association was formed at an enthusiastic meeting of representatives from all parts of the county, held in the office of County Superintendent Roth, on Thursday afternoon. Miss Anna C. McDonald, of the State Library, Harrisburg, gave advice in the forming of the association. Rev. Ralph W. Baker, of Fairfield, was elected secretary and Rev. D. W. Woods, near Gettysburg, president. Miss McDonald then explained that a new State law provides for the financial support, both to establish and maintain county libraries, the act permitting the County Commissioners to appropriate funds equal to two mills on the assessable property in the county. However, this appropriation must be renewed every year unless authorized permanently by a vote of the people. Miss McDonald further stated that the new organization in this county could rely on the State Library for assistance that it was in their power to give and that it would also be possible to borrow some books from that library.

In a general discussion, it was brought out that the plans of the local organization would probably include 10 central stations in the larger centers of the county and about 12 other deposit centers. The large central station will be located in Gettysburg and there it will be necessary to employ a trained librarian, an assistant and stenographer. A preliminary budget, including the salaries of the necessary librarians and possibly rentals for some stations was tentatively placed at three-fourths of a mill on the county property. However, it was said that if the library is brought to a reality, this expenditure will be very small in comparison to results.

The following executive committee was appointed to further the plans: Rev. D. W. Woods, Dr. T. C. Miller, Prof. H. Milton Roth, Rev. Ralph W. Baker and I. L. Taylor. The entire membership of the association will comprise the committee on membership. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday in the court house. Those present at Thursday's meeting included Mrs. Grace Taylor Himes, Mrs. M. J. Ehrenhart, Mrs. Marjorie Gerber Barnitz and Mrs. Kate W. Himes, New Oxford, and Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown.

Capper-Fess Education Bill Another Raid on the National Treasury

By SENATOR LAWRENCE C. PHIPPS of Colorado.

One of the most effective arguments against the enactment of the so-called Capper-Fess physical education bill is the amount of annual appropriation required to put the provisions of the measure into effect. To some, of course, it may seem niggardly to advance such a reason in opposition to such a bill. I know it has been quite the custom, for some years past, to speak in terms of billions when referring to the United States treasury, and to scoff at an annual outlay of $10,000,000 or $11,000,000, the sum provided for in this bill, as unworthy of serious consideration.

The fact remains that our people are staggering under a heavy load of taxation, and that it is the part of patriotism to cut necessary government expenditures to the bone.

This is not all. I submit that the proposed legislation does not, as purported, fill a crying need of which has long been neglected. I contend that the principle behind this measure is no new thing and that the passage of this bill is not necessary for the physical welfare of the boys and girls of this country. The "health supervisors and school nurses" mentioned in the bill could do nothing in my opinion, which cannot be as well performed by the school teachers themselves while at the same time imparting literary and business knowledge.

There are different schools of medicine, different views as to the art of healing; and the American citizen generally was unwilling to submit to an encroachment upon his own privileges and duties toward his children, to consent to have the government, even his own government, extend paternalistic aid through another bureau in Washington.

Roosevelt-Sequoia Must Be Protected Against the Water Power Act

By W. F. BADE, MRS. J. D. SHERMAN, G. B. GRINNELL.

William F. Bade, President Sierra Club—The Sierra club, as the first proposer of the Roosevelt-Sequoia National park, cannot support the Barbour bill unless it is amended so as to bring the new park under the protection given by the Jones-Esch act to existing national parks. We must oppose the policy of two kinds of parks as wrong in principle and dangerous in practice. Our representative in Washington is instructed to work only for a park exempt from power privilege.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, Chairman Department of Applied Education, General Federation of Women's Clubs—The policy of the General Federation of Women's clubs is the complete conservation of the National Parks and Monuments, and all national park projects which it supports must be based on this principle. We are therefore opposed to the Barbour bill. The federation strongly favored the project for a Roosevelt-Sequoia National park before the passage of the Jones-Esch bill, but we cannot now continue our support while it is subject to the Water Power act. Unless the bill is amended to give full protection from the provisions of the Water Power act we shall be compelled to do our utmost to defeat it.

Resolution of National Parks Committee, National Council of 22 Eastern and Western Associations—Resolved: That in the opinion of this committee, the Barbour bill (H. R. 7452) to create the Roosevelt-Sequoia National park should be so amended as to protect the entire area included within the park from water power developments in the same manner that all existing national parks are protected; and that this committee favors the creation of such a park if thus protected, and opposes the establishment of any national park without such protection.—George Bird Grinnell, Chairman; John B. Burnham, Secretary.

Terrible Indictment of Civilization: Plenty Here; Starvation There

By HENRY C. WALLACE, Secretary of Agriculture.

It is a terrible indictment of modern civilization that with such abundance here there are millions of people overseas suffering for the bare necessities and other millions starving to death. The purchasing power of our major grain crop is little more than half what it was on an average for the five prewar years of 1910-1914, inclusive.

This in turn has forced the manufacturer to restrict his output to the lessened demand, reducing his own purchases of raw material, and greatly reducing the number of his workmen. Men out of work must live on their savings and are in turn compelled to practice economy by reducing their own buying, and thus still further restrict the farmer's market. And so we find ourselves in a vicious circle which we are having difficulty in breaking through.

Pedestrians must register at the beginning of each year and pay a license fee of $5 for the privilege of living. There shall be no rebate if an automobile runs over them before the end of the year.

Words are the shadows of actions.—Democritus

HEY, GOBS!

PERHAPS in nothing else are the fashion and custom of the age so distinctly characterized as in the use of words. Any student of the language—any language, in fact—can tell the approximate date of the authorship of any writing by the choice of the words it contains. You know yourself how easy it is to recognize Shakespeare from his word choice—or at least, how differently Shakespeare and his contemporaries wrote from the way Sir Walter Scott and O. Henry, respectively, wrote.

Now, the words we choose to express our thoughts are, to a large extent, chosen because they are the correct words to use. There are styles and fashions in word usage, as there are in the method of writing letters and holding the knife, and we reflect the fashion of our own day.

Our grandmothers and grandfathers used a far more stilted form than we do. Not only does it sound stilted, because it is out of date, but it actually was a more formal and stilted usage. Slang, in those days, was not indulged in by the well bred. Today, say what we will against the use of slang, it is not a sign of bad breeding. And, although we may caution our sweet young daughters against using slang, still we cannot keep them from recognizing it as part and parcel of the present-day English tongue.

Not long ago, some big billboards inviting the sailors anchored in the Hudson river to the various festivals in the way of dances and feasts which New York city had prepared for them, began with the words, "Hey, Gobs!" The posters went on to specify time and place and variety of the entertainments.

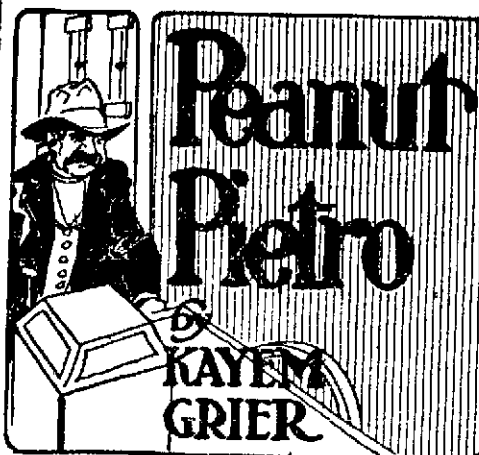

Now, can anybody imagine a Civil war bulletin of invitation to the blue-jackets of the day beginning with the words, "Hey, Gobs?" No; that was a day of more stilted language, and a slangy address to the sailors would have been quite undignified.

There are times today, of course, when we should avoid slang. Slang does sound cheap from a dignified matron. Too much slang shows a certain lack of imagination on the part of the user, anyway. But a stilted usage of words is quite unnecessary.

Of course, if you are writing to the diplomatic representative of a foreign government, for instance, asking what openings exist in his country for workers in some industry, you should couch your letter of inquiry in dignified language—even formal language. If you are making an address bestowing a gift, you would likewise use formal phraseology that might almost be termed stiff. And you wouldn't think, of course, in sending out invitations for a dinner party, of starting them off: "Hey, friend!" But the day of stilted language for any save the purely formal, almost documentary, communication, is gone. We talk easily and naturally, nowadays, and the fewer verbal flourishes we include in the better.

ANTOINETTE

TO THE average person, Antoinette and Annette are regarded as closely related—the former is thought to be merely an elaboration of the latter. But such is not the case. Annette, which will be discussed later, comes from the Hebrew, while Antoinette is of Roman extraction. It means "inestimable" and is said to have originated with Antius a son of Hercules.

Several distinguished Roman families bore the name of Antonius and its first famous exponent was Mark Anthony, avenger of Caesar and lover of Cleopatra. It received a reputation for sanctity through St. Anthony, the great hermit of the Fourth century.

The feminine form Antonia made its appearance in Italy, also, and in Spain, where it still is popular. The Germans adopted it as Antonie, but the French are responsible for the charming Antoinette which is forever pitifully recorded in history through the fate of lovely Marie Antoinette, queen of Louis XVI.

The French later contracted Antoinette to Toi-nette, a popular form throughout the country. Toi-nette is also sometimes used as a diminutive. Italy has an Antoinetta and an Antonica. Antonia and Antonetta are the favorite equivalents in Sweden.

The garnet is Antoinette's talismanic stone. It possesses many of the powers of the ruby, whose flaming heart it so closely imitates. It promises its wearer courage, a dauntless heart, and success in every ambition. Friday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

OLD TABBY'S LESSON

GRANDMA TABBY had had her day at catching mice and rats, and now she was getting old, and as her kind mistress gave her plenty of milk and cream, she did not need to hunt for her food.

Grandma Tabby's eyes were bright and her wits sharp, even if she did not hunt, and she decided she would give good advice to all the young kittens in the neighborhood about hunting mice and rats.

So all the Mother Pussies brought their children to Grandma Tabby to learn wisdom from her in the art of mice catching and hunting.

"You first of all," said Grandma Tabby, "must not eat too much. When I was young I seldom had any milk or cream. I had to work for my food. There is nothing better for young kittens than exercise. Just look at me at my age, my dears."

All the kittens looked at Grandma's fine, soft coat of fur and hoped some day they would have one like it.

"There is another rule you must follow, too," she said. "Never give up when you see a mouse until you have caught it. You must not expect your mistress to feed you. She gives you a home, and you should pay for this by keeping her house free from mice.

"If it is the barn you have to care for, instead of the house, just keep a sharp eye on the bags of corn and grain, and remember that watchful waiting has its reward."

All the little kittens listened with up-standing ears and wide-open eyes to all that Grandma Tabby was saying, for well they knew that such wisdom as hers was hard to find.

"Now, there are the rats," she said; "all pussies cannot catch rats, but the big ones can if they are brave, and my advice to you is this: When you see a rat look for a trap, there is sure to be one around; then all you have to do is to keep that rat from getting back to his hole."

"Chase him toward the trap, and when he finds he cannot get home he will run into the trap, you may be sure, and there you have him."

"Chasing rats into traps is just as clever as catching them, but never let a mouse go into a trap. Remember that it is a disgrace to any Puss to have a mouse caught in a trap in the house where it lives."

"I have heard the saying, 'Mind your P's and Q's,' but that is not for Pussies; you must mind your M's and R's, and if you do this you will become good mousers and rat hunters, which is the ambition of all well-brought-up kittens."

As all the kittens trotted home behind their mothers they looked so wise that any mouse or rat would have run for its life. I am sure, but he would never have escaped, so well did they learn from Grandma Tabby how to hunt.

PIGS IN WINTER

"Grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky, "I will be glad when the spring comes again so I can be out in the mud and can dig into the ground in the hope that I may find more to eat."

"I do not care so much for the winter and the old barn," said Sammy Sausage, "what are you going to do about it? Squeal, squeal, will you answer that question for me?"

"Well," said Sammy Sausage, "what are you going to do about it? Squeal, squeal, will you answer that question for me?"

"Cheer up, Porky," said Pinky Pig, "There is nothing to be done about it as far as I can see, grunt, grunt," said Pinky Pig.

"Nothing at all," said Miss Ham. "Squeal, squeal, there's nothing to be done about it at all."

"You might just as well not think about it," said Master Pinky Pig, "squeal, squeal, that's what I say." "Better think of something else, grunt, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon.

"There will be winter whether you like it or not," said Mrs. Pink Pig. "Squeal, squeal, that is the truth."

"It is indeed the truth," said Pinky Pig's mother. "Grunt, grunt, it is the truth."

"Just cheer up, Porky," said Miss Ham, "and think of the spring that is coming and the mud that there will be. There is always mud in the spring."

"Ah," said Porky, "I know all that, and I know, too, that there is no sense whatever in wishing it were spring when it is summer."

"For winter won't oblige a nice old pig like that. I know winter won't."

"But oh, pig friends, it is not only because I have no mud to dig in that I feel badly, but because I cannot bear to look out of the barn window and see that white, clean-looking snow."

"I don't like the snow," said Porky. "Now they say that in some places the snow gets dirty. Then I have more respect for the snow."

"I've seen the snow get dirty towards spring, but then it was being sensible anyway to let spring come in its place. So it begins then being more sensible by letting itself get dirty."

"But in the winter to look at all that whiteness—just miles and miles of whiteness! Oh dear, what a wretched view is that for a pig."

"I don't care to look at all the clean-white snow. I don't care for such a sight at all."

"Neither do we, grunt, grunt," said the other pigs.

"Ah, we all think the same about it. We all do! I am glad of that," said Grandfather Porky. "I look out with my little eyes and I say to myself: 'What ridiculous clean white stuff snow is!'"

"Well," said Miss Ham, "at least I don't suppose any one ever described snow in just that fashion."

"I don't suppose so," said Grandfather Porky Pig, "because everyone isn't a pig, and everyone can't talk or squeal or grunt as a pig can."

"Most creatures can only say that it is cold in the winter or that there has been a storm or that there is going to be a storm, or that they have had to get extra coal or wood, or that they feel very cold."

"But it takes a pig to properly describe the winter, and it takes Grandfather Porky Pig to do it in perfect fashion."

"Yes, snow is ridiculous clean white stuff. It isn't good to eat. It likes to be clean rather than dirty."

"It is cold and tiresome, and it can't be chewed or swallowed."

"Of course, it can be swallowed if any one wants to swallow it. But if we had a lot of pig weed 'Wretched View,' spreading itself all over the ground in the winter instead of snow—that would be something like!"

"Something like?" asked Miss Ham. "Something like—what?"

"That would be something worth while," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "But, of course, I might as well be cheery and not think of it, for the winter isn't going to pay any attention to what I say."

"That shows in itself how foolish the winter is, grunt, grunt, squeal, squeal."

CHAPTER XIII—Continued. —14—

A Jacob's ladder was hanging over the side of the schooner as the canoe shot in under her lee quarter, and half a minute later the expectant Neils stepped upon her deck. A tall dark man, wearing an ancient palmleaf hat, sat smoking on the hatch coaming, and him Neils Halvorsen addressed.

"Aye bane want to see Cap'n Scraggs," he said.

The tall dark man stood erect and cast a quick, questioning look at Neils Halvorsen. He hesitated before he made answer.

"What do you want?" he asked deliberately, and there was a subtle menace in his tones. As for Neils Halvorsen, thinking only of the surprise he had in store for his old employer, he replied evasively:

"Aye bane want job."

"Well, I'm Captain Scraggs, and I haven't any job for you. Get off my boat and wait until you're invited before you come aboard again."

For nearly a minute Neils Halvorsen stared open-mouthed at the spurious Captain Scraggs, while slowly there sifted through his brain the notion that he had happened across the track of a deep and bloody mystery of the seas. There was "something rotten in Denmark." Of that Neils Halvorsen was certain. More he could not be certain of until he had paved the way for a complete investigation, and as a preliminary step toward that end he clinched his fist and sprang swiftly toward the bogus skipper.

"Aye tank you bane d—n liar," he muttered, and struck home, straight and true, to the point of the jaw. The man went down, and in an instant Neils was on top of him. Off came the sailor's belt, the hands of the half-stunned man were quickly tied behind him, and before he had time to realize what had happened Neils had cut a length of cord from a trailing halyard and tied his feet securely, after which he gagged him securely with his bandana handkerchief.

A quick circuit of the ship convinced Neils Halvorsen that the remainder of the dastard crew were evidently ashore, so he descended to the cabin in search of further evidence of crime. He was quite prepared to find Captain Scraggs' master's certificate in its familiar oak frame, hanging on the cabin wall, but he was dumfounded to observe, hanging on the wall in a similar and equally familiar frame, the certificate of Adelbert P. Gibney as first mate of steam or sail, any ocean and any tonnage. But still a third framed certificate hung on the wall, and Neils again scratched his head when he read the wording that set forth the legal qualifications of Bartholomew McGuffey to hold down a job as chief engineer of coastwise vessels up to 1,200 tons net register.

It was patent, even to the dull-witted Swede, that there had been foul play somewhere, and the schooner's log, lying open on the table, seemed to offer the first means at hand for a solution of the mystery. Eagerly Neils turned to the last entry. It was not in Captain Scraggs' handwriting, and contained nothing more interesting than the stereotyped reports of daily observations, currents, weather conditions, etc., including a notation of arrival that day at Honolulu. Slowly Halvorsen turned the leaves backward, until at last he was rewarded by a glimpse of a different handwriting. It was the last entry under that particular handwriting, and read as follows:

"June 21, 19— Took an observation at noon, and find that we are in 20-48 S., 178-4 W. At this rate should hit Tuvana-tholo early this afternoon. All hands well and looking forward to the fun at Tuvana. Bent a new flying jib this morning and had the king and Tabu-Tabu holystone the deck. A. P. GIBNEY."

Neils Halvorsen sat down to think, and after several minutes of this unusual exercise it appeared to the Swede that he had stumbled upon a clue to the situation. The last entry in the log kept by Mr. Gibney was under date of June 21st—just eleven days ago, and on that date Mr. Gibney had been looking forward to some fun at Tuvana-tholo. Now where was that island and what kind of a place was it?

Neils searched through the cabin until he came across the book that is the bible of every South sea trading vessel—the British admiralty reports. Down the index went the old deck-hand's calloused finger and paused at "Friendly Islands—page 177," whereupon Neils opened the book at page 177 and after a five-minute search discovered that Tuvana-tholo was a barren, uninhabited island in latitude 21-2 south, longitude 178-48 west.

Ten days from the Friendly Islands, the paper said. That meant under power and sail with the trades abaft the beam. It would take nearer fifteen days for the run from Honolulu to that desert island, and Neils Halvorsen wondered whether the marooned men would still be alive by the time aid could reach them. For by some sixth sailor sense Neils Halvorsen became convinced that his old friends of the vegetable trade were marooned. They had gone ashore for some kind of a frolic, and the crew had stolen the schooner and left them to their fate, believing that the castaways would never be heard from and that dead men tell no tales.

He rushed on deck, carried his prisoner down into the cabin, and locked the door on him. A minute later he was clinging to the Jacob's ladder, the canoe shot in to the side of the vessel at his gruff command and passed on shoreward without missing a stroke of the paddle. An hour later, accompanied by three Kanaka sailors picked up at random along the water front, Neils Halvorsen was pulled out to the Maggie II. Her crew had not returned and the bogus captain was still triced hard and fast in the cabin.

The Swede did not bother to investigate in detail the food and water supply. A hasty round of the schooner convinced him that she had at least a month's supply of food and water. Only one thought surged through his mind, and that was the awful necessity for haste. The anchor came in with a rush, the Kanaka boys chanting a song that sounded to Neils like a funeral dirge, and Neils went below and turned the gasoline engines wide open. The Maggie II swung around and with a long streak of opalescent foam trailing behind her swung down the bay and faded at last in the ghostly moonlight beyond Diamond head; after which Neils Halvorsen, with murder in his eye and a tarred rope's end in his horny fist, went down into the cabin and talked to the man who posed as Captain Scraggs. In the end he got a confession. Fifteen minutes later he emerged, smiling grimly, gave the Kanaka boy at the wheel the course, and turned in to sleep the sleep of the conscience-free and the weary.

Darkness was creeping over the beach at Tuvana-tholo before Mr. Gibney could smother the despair in his heart sufficient to spur his jaded imagination to working order. For nearly an hour the three castaways had sat on the beach in dumb horror, gazing seaward. They were not alone in this, for a little further up the beach the two Fiji islanders sat huddled on their haunches, gazing stupidly first at the horizon and then at their white captors. It was the sight of these two worthless that spurred Mr. Gibney's torpid brain to action.

"Didn't you say, Mac, that when we left these two cannibals alone on this island that it would develop into a case of dog eat dog or somethin' of that nature?"

Captain Scraggs sprang to his feet, his face white with a new terror. However, he had endured so much since embarking with Mr. Gibney on a life of wild adventure that his nerves had become rather inured to impending death, and presently his fear gave way to an overmastering rage. He hurled his hat on the sands and jumped on it until it was a mere shapeless rag.

"Let's call a meetin' of the Robinson Crusoe syndicate," said Mr. Gibney.

"Second the motion," rumbled McGuffey.

"Carried," said the commodore.

"The first business before the meetin' is the organization of an expedition to chase these two cannibals to the other end of the island. I ain't got the heart to kill 'em, so let's chase 'em away before they get fresh with us."

"Good idea," responded McGuffey, whereupon he picked up a rock and threw it at the king. Mr. Gibney followed with two rocks, Captain Scraggs screamed defiance at the enemy, and the enemy fled in wild disorder, pursued by the syndicate. After a chase of half a mile Mr. Gibney led his cohorts back to the beach.

"Let's build a fire—not that we need it, but just for company—and sleep till mornin'. By that time my imagination'll be in workin' order and I'll scheme a breakfast out of this Godforsaken hole."

At the first hint of dawn Mr. Gibney, true to his promise, was up and scouting for breakfast. He found some gooneys on a rocky crag and killed half a dozen of them with a club. On his way back to camp he discovered a few handfuls of sea salt in a crevice between some rocks, and the syndicate breakfasted an hour later on roast gooney. It was oily and fishy but an excellent substitute for nothing at all, and the syndicate was grateful. The breakfast would have been cheerful, in fact, if Captain Scraggs had not made repeated reference to his excessive thirst. McGuffey lost patience before the meal was over, and cuffed Captain Scraggs, who thereupon subsided with tears in his eyes. This hurt McGuffey. It was like salt in a fresh wound, so he patted the skipper on the back and humbly asked his pardon. Captain Scraggs forgave him and murmured something about death making them all equal.

"The next business before the syndicate," announced Mr. Gibney, "is a search of this island for water."

They searched all forenoon. At intervals they caught glimpses of the two cannibals skulking behind sand-dunes, but they found no water. Toward the center of the island, however, the soil was less barren, and here a grove of coconut palms lifted their tufted crests invitingly.

"We will camp in this grove," said the commodore, "and keep guard over these green coconuts. There must be nearly a hundred of them and I notice a little taro root here and there. As those coconuts are full of milk, that insures us life for a week or two if we go on a short ration. By bathin' several times a day we can keep down our thirst some and perhaps it'll rain."

"What if it does?" snapped Captain Scraggs bitterly. "We ain't got nothin' but our hats to catch it in."

"Well, then, Scraggsy, old stick-in-the-mud," replied the commodore quizzically, "it's a cinch you'll go thirsty. Your hat looks like a cullender."

Captain Scraggs choked with rage, and Mr. Gibney, springing at the nearest palm, shinned to the top of it in the most approved sailor fashion. A moment later, instead of coconuts, rich unctuous curses began to descend on McGuffey and Scraggs.

"Gib, my dear boy," inquired Scraggs, "whatever is the matter of you?"

"That hound Tabu-Tabu's been strippin' our coconut grove," roared the commodore. "He must have spent half the night up in these trees."

"Thank the Lord they didn't take 'em all," said McGuffey piously. "Chuck me down a nut, Gib," said Captain Scraggs. "I'm famished."

In conformity with the commodore's plans, the castaways made camp in the grove. For a week they subsisted on gooneys, taro root, coconuts and coconut milk, and a sea-turtle which Scraggs found wandering on the beach. This suggested turtle eggs to Mr. Gibney, and a change of diet resulted. Nevertheless, the unaccustomed food, poorly cooked as it was, and the lack of water, told cruelly on them, and their strength failed rapidly.

At the end of a week, all hands were troubled with indigestion and McGuffey developed a low fever. They had lost much flesh and were a white, haggard-looking trio. On the afternoon of the tenth day on the island the sky clouded up and Mr. McGuffey predicted a williwaw. Captain Scraggs inquired feebly if it was good to eat.

That night it rained, and to the great joy of the marooned mariners Mr. Gibney discovered, in the center of a big sandstone rock, a natural reservoir that held about ten gallons of water. They drank to repletion and felt their strength return a thousand-fold. Tabu-Tabu and the king came into camp about this time, and pleaded for a ration of water. Mr. Gibney, swearing horribly at them, granted their request, and the king, in his gratitude, threw himself at the commodore's feet and kissed them. But Mr. Gibney was not to be deceived, and after furnishing them with a supply of water in coconut calabashes, he ordered them to their own side of the island.

On the eighteenth day the last drop of water was gone, and on the twenty-second day the last of the coconuts disappeared. The prospects of more rain were not bright. The gooneys were becoming shy and distrustful and the syndicate was experiencing more and more difficulty, not only in killing them, but in eating them. McGuffey, who had borne up uncomplainingly, was shaking with fever and hardly able to stagger down the beach to look for turtle eggs. The syndicate was sick, weak and emaciated almost beyond recognition, and on the twenty-fifth day Captain Scraggs fainted twice. On the twenty-sixth day McGuffey crawled into the shadow of a stunted mimosa bush and started to pray!

It was the finish. The commodore knew it, and sat with bowed head in his gaunt arms, wondering, wondering. Slowly his body began to sway; he muttered something, slid forward on his face, and lay still. And as he lay there on the threshold of the unknown he dreamed that the Maggie II came into view around the headland, a bone in her teeth and every stitch of canvas flying. He saw her luff up into the wind and hang there shivering; a moment later her sails came down by the run, and he saw a little splash under her port bow as her hook took bottom. There was a commotion on decks, and then to Mr. Gibney's dying ears came faintly the shouts and songs of the black boys as a whaleboat shot into the breakers and pulled swiftly toward the beach. Mr. Gibney dreamed that a white man sat in the stern sheets of this whaleboat, and as the boat touched the beach it seemed to Mr. Gibney that this man sprang ashore and ran swiftly toward him. And—Mr. Gibney twisted his suffering lips into a wry smile as he realized the oddities of this mirage—it seemed to him that this visionary white man bore a striking resemblance to Neils Halvorsen. Neils Halvorsen, of all men! Old Neils, "the squarehead" deckhand of the green-pea trade! Dull, bowlegged Neils, with his lost dog smile and his—

Mr. Gibney rubbed his eyes feebly and half staggered to his feet. What was that? A shout? Without doubt he had heard a sound that was not the moaning of their remorseless prison-keeper, the sea. And—

"Hands off," shrieked Mr. Gibney and struck feebly at the imaginary figure rushing toward him. No use. He felt himself swept into strong arms and carried an immeasurable distance down the beach. Then somebody threw water in his face and pressed a drink of brandy and sweet water to his parched lips. His swimming senses rallied a moment, and he discovered that he was lying in the bottom of a whaleboat. McGuffey lay beside him, and on a thwart in front of him sat good old Neils Halvorsen with Captain Scraggs' head on his knees. As Mr. Gibney looked at this strange tableau Captain Scraggs opened his eyes, glanced up at Neils Halvorsen, and spoke:

"Why if it ain't old squarehead Neils," he muttered wonderingly, "if it ain't Neils, I'll go to ladies or some other support." He closed his eyes again and subsided into a sort of lethargy, for he was content. He knew he was saved.

Mr. Gibney rolled over, and, struggling to his knees, leaned over McGuffey and peered into his drawn face.

"Mac, old shipmate! Mac, speak to me. Are you alive?"

B. McGuffey, Esquire, opened a pair of glazed eyes and stared at the commodore.

"Did we lick 'em?" he whispered. "The last I remember the king was puttin' it all over Scraggsy. And that Tabu hoy—was—no slouch." McGuffey paused, and glanced warily around the boat, while a dawning horror appeared in his sunken eyes. "Go back, Neils—go back—for God's sake. There's two niggers—still—on the island. Bring 'em some—water. They're cannibals—Neils, but never—mind. Get them—aboard—the poor devils—if they're living. I—wouldn't leave a—crocodile on that—hell hole, if I could—help it."

An hour later the Robinson Crusoe syndicate, including the man Friday and the Goat, were safe aboard the Maggie II, and Neils Halvorsen, with the tears streaming down his bronzed cheeks, was sparingly doling out to them a mixture of brandy and water. And when the syndicate was strong enough to be allowed all the water it wanted, Neils Halvorsen propped them up on deck and told the story. When he had finished, Captain Scraggs turned to Mr. Gibney.

"Gib, my dear boy," he said, "make a motion."

"I move," said the commodore, "that we set Tabu-Tabu and the king down on the first inhabited island we can find. They've suffered enough. And I further move that we readjust the ownership of the Maggie II syndicate and cut the best Swede on earth in on a quarter of the profits."

"Second the motion," said McGuffey. "Carried," said Captain Scraggs.

CHAPTER XIV.

The lookout on the power schooner Maggie II had sighted Diamond head before Commodore Adelbert P. Gibney, Captain Phineas P. Scraggs, and Engineer Bartholomew McGuffey were enabled to declare, in all sincerity (or at least with as much sincerity as one might reasonably expect from this band of roving rascals), that they had entirely recovered from their harrowing experiences on the desert island of Tuvana-tholo, in the Friendly group.

At the shout of "Land, ho!" Mr. McGuffey yawned, stretched himself, and sat up in the wicker lounging chair where he had sprawled for days with Mr. Gibney and Captain Scraggs, under the awning on top of the house. He flexed his biceps reflectively, while his companions, stretched at full length in their respective chairs, watched him lazily.

"As a member of the Maggie syndicate an' ownin' an' votin' a quarter interest," boomed the engineer, "I here by call a meetin' o' the said syndicate for the purpose of transactin' any an' all business that may properly come before the meetin'."

"Pass the word for Neils Halvorsen," suggested Mr. Gibney. "Bless his squarehead soul," he added.

"We got a quorum without him, an' besides this business is just between us three."

"Meetin' come to order." The commodore tapped the hot deck with his bare heel twice. "Haul away, Mac."

"I move you, gentlemen, that it be the sense of this meetin' that B. McGuffey, Esquire, be an' he is hereby appointed a committee o' one to law the everlasting daylight out o' that sinful former chief mate o' ourn for abandonin' the syndicate to a horrible death on that there desert island. Do I hear a second to that motion?"

"Second the motion," chirped Captain Scraggs.

"The motion's denied," announced Mr. Gibney firmly.

"Now, looky here, Gib, that ain't fair. Didn't you fight Tabu-Tabu an' didn't Scraggsy fight the king o' Kan-davo? I ain't had no fightin' this entire v'yage an' I did call'tate to lick that doggone mate."

"Mac, it can't be done nohow."

"Oh, it can't, eh? Well, I'll just bet you two boys my interest in the syndicate—"

"It ain't that, Mac, it ain't that. Nobody's doubtin' your natural ability to mop him up. But it ain't policy. You wasn't sore agin 'em cannibal savages, was you? You made Neils go back an' save 'em, an' it took us two days to beat up to the first inhabited island an' drop 'em off—"

"But a cannibal's like a dumb beast, Gib. He ain't responsible. This mate knows better."

"Ah!" Mr. Gibney leveled a horny forefinger at the engineer. "That's where you hit the nail on the head. He's too fly, and there's only two ways to keep him from flyin' away with us. The first is to feed him to the sharks and the second is to treat him like a long-lost brother. I know he ought to be overboard, but I ain't got the heart to kill him in cold blood. Consequently, we got to let the villain live, an' if you go to beatin' him up, Mac, you'll make him sore an' he'll peach on us when we get to Honolulu. If us three could get back to San Francisco with clean hands, I'd say lick the beggar an' lick him for fair. But we got to remember that this mate was one of the original filibuster crew o' the old Maggie I. The day we tackled the Mexican navy an' took this power schooner away from 'em, we put ourselves forty fathom plumb outside the law, an' this mate was present an' knows it. We've changed the vessel's name an' rig, an' doctored up the old Maggie's papers to suit the Maggie II, an' we've give her a new dress. But at that, it's hard to disguise a ship in a live port, an' the secret service agents of the Mexican government may be a-lyain' for us in San Francisco; and with this here mate agin us an' ready to turn state's evidence, we're pirates under the law, an' it don't take much imagination to see three pirates swingin' from the same yard-arm. No, sir, Mac, I ain't got no wish, now that we're fixed nice an' comfortable with the world's goods, to be hung for a pirate in the mere shank o' my youth. Why, I ain't fifty year old yet."

SALT WATER MORE BUOYANT

Fact That Is Well Known to Mariners May Be News to Some of Our Readers.

A boy dropped a ball into a small hole and could not get it out, so he poured water into the hole, thinking the ball would float to the surface. As the ball was slightly heavier than the water it remained on the bottom. Then the boy thought of mixing salt with the water, since he knew salt water would float heavier objects than fresh water would. He tried this and was rewarded with the floating ball.

This particular fact is demonstrated at the mouths of rivers. Objects rolling along the bottom of a river, too heavy to come to the top, will rise when carried out to sea. The rule also applies to boats. A ship with a cargo on the sea will sink sometimes a foot or two on entering a fresh water port. If she leaves the port with her cargo, she will rise on entering the ocean. For that reason a ship may be loaded apparently too heavily at a pier and still be all right on the waves.

In building a dam, the fact of salt water's being heavier than fresh must be remembered.—Kansas City Star.

SOME PEOPLE PREFER TABLETS

Pepto-Mangan Is Sold in Liquid and Tablets—the Same Medicinally.

The famous blood builder, Gude's Pepto-Mangan, can be had in tablet form, as well as in liquid. Some people prefer Pepto-Mangan tablets to the liquid. They are put up in a convenient package. There are people who take the liquid Pepto-Mangan at home morning and night, and take the tablets at noon time.

Medicinally the liquid and the tablet form of Gude's Pepto-Mangan are the same. Any druggist can supply this well-known blood builder. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years. It restores the blood to its normal healthy state by increasing the number of red cells. Men, women and children who are run down, weak, pale and sickly, regain normal health by helping the blood to get back its strength. Look for the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" on the package. Moundsville, W. Va. — "Some years ago in the opening of Spring I began to go down in health. I became nervous, weak, could not eat nor sleep, and became very thin. Was so completely run-down I could not work. I went on this way one whole summer. I took medicine but it did me no good. I was so weak I could scarcely get up and down stairs, when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. POWER OF DOLLAR IS EASILY SHOWN
Keep One Moving and See What It Will Do for Your Community.
PAYS MULTITUDE OF DEBTS
When It Is Sent Out of Town, However, to Pay for What Can Be Bought at Home It Is Gone Forever.
(Copyright.)
It is a rather wonderful thing, when you stop to think about it what one lone dollar will do, if it is kept at work. This has been illustrated in a striking manner on several occasions by means of a very simple experiment. If you want to see just how important a role a silver dollar or a dollar bill plays in the life of a community here is the way to do it. Just attach a tag to the dollar and turn it loose, with the request that every person who receives the dollar make a note on the tag as to how he received it. The result will be an eye-opener.
Here is the way it works: Smith, the lumber dealer, who first possesses the dollar, buys some groceries from Brown and pays for them with the dollar. About that time Jones, the plumber, who had done some work for Brown, sends his collector around and Brown pays the bill with this dollar. Jones owes Green, the printer, a small advertising bill, so he sends this dollar with possibly some others, to Green to pay his bill. Green had just put the dollar in his cash drawer when in comes Black, the milkman, to whom Green owes a dollar for milk delivered at his house. Green takes the dollar out of his cash drawer and pays Black. For some time Black has owed White, the carpenter, for some work done on his dairy house, so now he takes the dollar that Green has paid him and pays up what he owes White. White still owes for some lumber that he bought from Smith, the lumber dealer, so he takes the dollar and squares up his account with Smith. Smith now has his dollar back. Brown has been able to pay his plumbing bill. Jones has squared up with the printer, and so on, all around the circle.
What Might Have Happened.
Now suppose that Smith, instead of buying his groceries from Brown, had purchased them from a mail order house in a far distant city and sent his dollar to pay for them. Brown would not have had that dollar to pay Jones,

Despite the fact that the year 1921 was generally considered a lean business year, the Rev. Fr. Shanahan, rector of the Immaculate Conception church, this place, is able to show, in the annual parish report, over $1000 more income than was received in 1920—a most creditable showing—for the management of which the venerable Father is deserving of untold praise.

A slight interruption in train service on the W. M. Ry. occurred Friday evening which delayed the evening trains. When the down train started at Brush Run, the sudden jolt caused the coupling between the tender and passenger car to break. With the aid of a chain the passenger car was towed to the siding and then switched about in front of the engine and thus propelled the remainder of the journey. This maneuver required about a half hour and tied up traffic on the Lincoln Highway for a considerable time.

By the narrow margin of three points Troop No. 1, Hanover, of the Conewago Council, Boy Scouts of America, won out in the third month of the inter-troop advancement contest over the nearest competitor, Troop No. 1, New Oxford. These two troops are now running a neck to neck race in the contest which will give the winners a trip to Washington. The name of H. R. Konrad, scout master of troop No. 1, will be engraved for the second time on the silver loving cup to be awarded the scout master whose name appears the greatest number of times thereon at the end of six months, as a consequence of the results at the end of the third month. Troop No. 1 Hanover is now leading in the total score by 8 points. The scores of the first three contestants are: Hanover No. 1, 397; New Oxford, 389; Hanover No. 2, 176.

FIRE IN HANOVER STORE

About 5 o'clock Friday evening fire of a mysterious origin was discovered in the cellar of the clothing store of Paul E. Sell, Hanover, by Robert Emswiler. The damage caused by the fire was confined to the first floor joists and was not considerable, but Mr. Sell's entire stock of furnishings has been badly smoked, which will mean a heavy loss. The proprietor had locked up the store at 5 o'clock and had left for home with his clerk, Walter McKinney. Mr. Sell, who is also secretary of the Hanover Building & Loan Assn., asserted that no person was in the cellar Friday

CHASES MOTHER WITH KNIFE

Francis A. Emmons, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Emmons, Gettysburg, will serve a term at the Phoenixville Catholic reformatory for an assault and battery attempt on his mother, Edith A. Emmons, Friday afternoon. Francis, it is alleged, in addition to striking his mother with his fists, carried her thru the house and out into the yard with a butcher knife. The State police were notified and private Goucher arrested the boy. During the morning, it is said, Francis had been playing with other boys in the yard behind his home. The game was of the "wild west" variety and Francis struck several of his playmates knocking them to the ground during the game. They soon deserted him and he then made his assault upon his mother. His father was formerly chief of police in Gettysburg but is now a railroad worker and was away from home at the time of the alleged assault upon his wife. Francis was hailed before Justice Hill and after a preliminary hearing at which his mother appeared against him, was held under $100 bail for his appearance at court. In default of bail, he was committed to jail. In court his mother took the witness stand against her son and testified to his incorrigibility. She told the court how he swore at her on the street when with company and abused her at home on numerous occasions. The court then called the boy to a chair beside him on the bench and questioned him concerning his conduct. Sheriff Hartman, who had the boy under his care one night, testified that he was one of the worst boys he had ever seen.

PHYSICIAN SUE

FOR $10,631 DAMAGE
Claiming $10,631.50 damages, a suit was entered Monday against Dr. W. F. Bacon, York, in the office of Prothonotary Snyder by Brenda K. Badders, a minor, by her father, Harry M. Badders, of Littlestown, and by the latter, in his own right. It is claimed that the doctor failed to properly set a leg broken at Abbotstown sometime ago in an auto accident, and $10,000 is sought by the girl for loss of time, physical pain, mental anguish, privation, inconvenience, temporary disfigurement and lameness. The father claims $631.50 for loss of his daughter's service, hospital expenses, medicines and treatment, surgical operations, and other expenses. The girl, it is claimed, following her discharge by Dr. Bacon as cured, went through additional operation and treatment by Dr. George S. Bennett, at the Church Home and Infirmary, Baltimore, and as a result was permanently cured.

NIGHT TRIP IN BLIZZARD

At the height of the blizzard on Saturday night Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbotstown, was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Menchey, 3 miles from Hanover, along Carlisle pike. The Stork was racing for the house and the doctor was confronted by no mean task. Ten or twelve men met the doctor in the Pigeon Hills where he was stuck in a snow drift with his automobile. Reaching the house just one jump ahead of The Stork Dr. Miller was present at the birth of a boy baby. After midnight the doctor left on the return trip, accompanied by the gang of men and, after a three hours fight with the storm, reached his home. Time and again huge drifts blocked the way and the doctor's car was shoved out, only to become stuck again. The distance covered one way was little more than three miles, it is said.

CHILD DIES FROM BURNS

After hovering between life and death four days, during which time he suffered untold agonies as the result of burns received when playing with paper about a stove, Monday a week, Donald F. Barnhart, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Barnhart, Gettysburg, died in the Warner hospital Friday evening. Flames he had inhaled were the cause of his death. The accident which led to his death occurred when Mrs. Barnhart sent the little fellow upstairs to get a dress for his younger sister. He was gone a few minutes when he came rushing downstairs screaming and into the arms of his mother with his clothing ablaze. Two younger sisters and the parents survive. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, the Rev. Fr. Stock officiating.

Attention is called to the borough statement which appears in this issue. The indebtedness, which last year was 13,759, has been reduced to $11,606—a praiseworthy accomplishment. Two big improvements last year were the picking of Pleasant street and the furnishing of an adequate water supply to the Ligonston shoe factory. More success to the local authorities in 1922!
Come and see the Durant car—It is now here, at the New Oxford Garage.
J. F. Miller & R. M. Wolf.

Herman, Lincoln Way, East, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, after an illness from a complication of diseases which began on Friday. Her maiden name was Stallsmith. Her husband, George W. Deardorff, died about six months ago. Surviving her are five children: Mrs. Charles Chronister, Dillsburg; Mrs. Robert Howe, York Springs; Mrs. Mervin Winand, East Berlin; Charles Deardorff, near Swift Run, and Mrs. Herman, with whom she made her home. Funeral from her late home Friday morning, at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Harry Kehm, of the Reformed charge, East Berlin, officiating. Interment will be made in New Oxford cemetery. The Deardorffs were former residents of Round Hill but moved to New Oxford about five years ago.

WM. G. WEAVER BECOMES

PARTNER WITH FATHER
William G. Weaver, son of H. T. Weaver, Monday became a partner in the dry goods department store, Gettysburg, conducted under the firm name of G. W. Weaver & Son. Mr. Weaver was graduated from Gettysburg college in the class of 1921 and since June has been associated with his father in the business. He will continue in the capacity of assistant manager and advertising manager. G. W. Weaver, the new member's grandfather, and H. T. Weaver opened business in their present location in April, 1885, in a small room, 28x33 feet, with a partition dividing the space into two parts. Success came quickly and they immediately enlarged the store. In 1903 the firm bought the building of the late Cassius Neely, giving the additional room as now used, making a selling floor space of 10,000 square feet. Since the death of the senior member of the firm in 1914, the business has been directed entirely by H. T. Weaver, who now announces the association of his son with him in the firm. Through the efforts of the members of the firm and the liberal use of advertising the business has grown steadily from year to year until now their store is the largest of its kind in Adams county.

JURY DECIDES FOR KRUG

After deliberation of about 2½ hours, Thursday, the jury selected to hear the suit brought by G. M. Krug, of Littlestown, against James Murren, near McSherrystown, returned verdict awarding Krug $513.25. This sum includes the purchase price of the tractor of $400 which Krug sold Murren and for which he took his note and also the interest on the money since 1920. Murren, it is said, refused to meet the note upon its maturity whereupon Krug entered the note for judgment. A stay was granted Murren against the execution of the judgment. At the time he signed the note Murren stated that he was under the impression that it was not a promissory note he was signing but merely a bill of sale.

Harry W. Wolf, Adams county, and Miss Cecelia Mummert, New Baltimore, were married by the Rev. J. A. Metzger, 15 years ago Friday.

Wm. H. Emmert was re-appointed postmaster of New Oxford, 15 years ago Thursday.

TRUCK STATION HERE

In the near future there will be held a free meeting in New Oxford backed by a Philadelphia company in the interest of a proposed truck route from Abbotstown via Biglerville, Gettysburg and the Lincoln Highway to Philadelphia. This place will be on the line of the route and the promoters want all the farmers and others to be with them. Nathaniel C. Miller is helping to get the meeting in this place. The plan will likely put some more business in the town as the promoters will want a produce house, slaughter house, milk station and fruit shed for packing ready for shipment as all apples will be boxed. The company will start with three heavy trucks and three trailers and the bodies of the trailers will be refrigerated so that they can haul all kinds of perishable goods in the very best test weather and make safe delivery. All produce will be bought for cash and paid for on delivery to the station, excepting milk as that will have to be tested first before they can make out the bills, and if farmers are in need of cash they can get that on account which will be the same as cash. The object of this company is to get away from the clutches of the middlemen and jobbers and sell direct to the consumer in Philadelphia through their own stores and in this way they can allow the farmer more and give the consumer a share of the gain through this transaction which will be appreciated by all parties. The whole cost of running a truck and a trailer for 125 miles is $54.00 and out of this the trailer only cost $7.02 and the truck $47.23, the promoters claim. The company will teach the farmer how to take care of produce, all eggs will be candled before shipment and all losses will be taken off of the careless parties. The company proposes to do all their own killing and cure all meat and will make their own sausage and scrap-ple.

107 KILLED WHEN ROOF FALLS

One hundred and seven persons lost their lives in the collapse Saturday night of the snow-laden roof of the Knickerbocker motion picture theatre in Washington. The list of injured stands at 134, with 14 listed as "seriously injured." All the dead have been identified. The large majority of the victims, both killed and injured, were residents of that city, although many came recently from other places. A few more than 300 were in the audience that was roaring in laughter at a filmed comedy when the roof fell on them like a blanket, carrying down the front of the wide balcony in its crash.

William I. Bickle, Jr., 46, and his daughter, Miss Frances Bickle, 14, were among those who lost their lives in the Knickerbocker motion picture theatre in Washington on Saturday night. Mr. Bickle was a former resident of Gettysburg and a brother of Mrs. Warren Gilbert and nephew of Dr. P. M. Bickle, dean of Gettysburg college. The deceased is survived by another daughter, Katherine, of Washington, also six sisters. Mr. Bickle married Miss Laura Kinser, of Gettysburg, about 22 years ago, and she preceded him in death 8 years ago, being buried in Gettysburg. More than 20 years ago he left Gettysburg and went to the National Capital. Mr. Bickle and daughters were guests last summer of Mrs. Mary Crane, of the Pfaltzgraff apartments, McSherrystown.

The scene of the accident is said to have been only a short distance from the homes of the Hon. Jos. H. Himes and Mrs. Geo. N. Acker, both formerly of New Oxford. Friends of Mr. Himes and Mrs. Acker were numbered among the victims.

$125 FOR YEARS SERVICE

Thru the interest of Mrs. Kat. W. Himes, Center Square, we learn that the late Dr. Pfeiffer, New Oxford's first postmaster, came to this place in 1821 and was commissioned postmaster in 1822. His pay for the first three months was seven cents and the entire year netted him $125 instead of $125 as appeared in this paper last week. Dr. Pfeiffer in 1824 was commissioned a Justice of the Peace and served for 17 years. His story tells us that Dr. Pfeiffer was one of the most highly cultured residents of Pennsylvania. The older residents of town recall clearly the scholarly looking old gentleman.

BLANCHE
BLAIR

THAT Tanlac is a wonderful medicine for delicate children is conclusively proven by the remarkable results accomplished in the cases of the three children shown in this picture.

Little Blanche Blair, of Providence, R. I., age 13, gained 10 pounds; Regina McCabe, at right, age 9, of Scranton, Pa., gained 15 pounds; Little Richard Leary, Jr., of Philadelphia, who was very delicate, is now in fine, robust health. The statements made by their parents are as follows:

Mr. A. M. Blair, residing at 20 Atwood street, Providence, R. I., said: "We are just so happy over the change Tanlac has made in our little girl that we can't do or say enough to show our appreciation. She had lost nearly 20 pounds in weight and looked so frail and weak that her mother and I were both almost worried sick over her condition. Since taking Tanlac, she has already gained 10 pounds, her color is better than it ever has been and she looks and acts like a different girl."

Mrs. Catherine McCabe, 414 Dickens Ave., Scranton, Pa., said: "The flu left my little Regina in such a bad condition that I have no idea she would be with me now if it hadn't been for Tanlac. It is a mystery to me how she lived on the little she was eating and was so lifeless she never even cared to play with the dolls and toys she got at Christmas. Since taking Tanlac she is as lively and well as any child could be and has gained 15 pounds in weight. I will always praise Tanlac for restoring our little girl's health."

Richard Leary, 2342 Pothorpe St., Philadelphia, said: "There is no doubt in my mind but that Tanlac saved my little boy's life. For two years I wouldn't have been a bit surprised to have seen him drop off at any time. He had stomach trouble and many a time the gas pressed up into his chest until his heart pulsed tated so I thought sure he couldn't breathe but a few more gasps. But Tanlac gave him back to us strong and well and we will praise it to our dying day."

The effect of Tanlac on the delicate stomachs of the young is one of the strongest evidences of its wholesomeness as well as its unusual merit. Although a powerful reconstructive, Tanlac contains no harmful ingredients, minerals or opiates which are so often found in other medicines. Being composed of the most beneficial roots and herbs known to science it is purely vegetable and can be taken by the most delicate children, and does not upset or injure the weakest or most delicate stomach.

There is a Tanlac agent in every town.—Advertisement.

HORSE IS FOND OF MOTORCARS

Chewing of Detective's Car Wins New Summons for Licenseless Peddler.

New York.—Were all the horses in New York endowed with the genius that characterizes Nero, who works for Maurice Kelly, peddler, there would be fewer motorcars about.

Detective Walter J. Coffey is attached to the Oak Street station. Because he lives in Flatbush he employs a silver to ride to duty.

The other night he parked the silver in front of the Oak Street station house. Right here is where Nero, peddler's horse, comes in. He was parked a few minutes later directly back of the silver.

Endowed with the identical passion that prompted his namesake to burn Rome, and propelled, perhaps, by a whim to institute general war against the machines that have all but put him and his likes out of business, Nero commenced to tear the leather out of Officer Coffey's car with his teeth and to scatter upholstery amid the snowflakes.

This process continued until Nero was spied from the window by Officer Coffey. What Officer Coffey said to Nero is not recorded. Neither is any mention made of the speech which Officer Coffey made to Peddler Kelly when he arrived five minutes later.

In the course of this harangue, however, it became a matter of suspicion to the detective that Kelly, who lives at No. 918 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn, was plying his trade without a license.

Here, indeed, was heart balm! Officer Coffey handed Peddler Kelly a summons. And as the two men mounted their respective vehicles, preparatory to altered parking arrangements, a third dissertation delighted the ears of the bystanders.

This one was addressed by Peddler Kelly to his horse.

STEALS TO GET INTO JAIL

Twice Refused Lodging, Man Takes Pencils and Asks Arrest in Goshen, N. Y.

Goshen, N. Y.—J. H. Guy, a prisoner in the Orange county jail, stole two pencils, according to the authorities, to get into custody after he had been refused lodging at two jails. Guy was out of work and needed food and rest.

Guy asked Policeman David Clark for a night's lodging in the Goshen jail. Refused, he went to the Orange county jail, only to be turned down again. The authorities allege he left, saying he would force them to care for him, went to Conklin's coal office, forced an entrance, and violated the law technically by taking only two pencils.

Then, seeking a policeman, Guy said he had broken the law, and demanded he be arrested. He was held for the grand jury.

Guy is the most contented prisoner Sheriff W. M. Leonard has in his calaboose.

Automobile Mirror as a New Flirtation Aid

Los Angeles, Cal.—Now comes the rear sight automobile mirror as the latest vehicle for flirtation. Mrs. Hattie Webb of Los Angeles introduced the mirrors in her testimony when she sought a divorce, alleging that Mrs. Babe Eberlee always sat in the back seat of her husband's automobile and flirted with Mr. Webb. The husband did not contest the case and Mrs. Webb was granted a divorce and the custody of the two children.

WILD MAN LIVES ALONE IN CAVE

Makes Night Raids on Neighboring Farms and Carries Away Animals.

FIGHTS WITH HUNTERS

Won Hand-to-Hand Encounter With Man Who Battled Him in His Cave in Effort to Win Reward.

Mt. Sterling, Ill.—A wild man, living in a cave near here, is thwarting all efforts of police and armed citizens to capture him and is keeping the countryside in terror with his raids on outlying farms. A price has been set on his head, but desperate attempts to capture him in his lair have proved vain.

The wild man recently made a series of bold robberies near Mt. Pleasant, carrying off calves and sheep to a deserted mine where he stays hidden in the daytime. Ambrose Smith, a dead shot and a tireless hunter, was seriously wounded in a terrific hand-to-hand encounter with the mysterious man-monster.

Is Huge Creature With Bony Hands.

"The wild man has long, wiry hair that bristles about his savage-looking face," Smith said in his home, where he is recovering from the adventure. "In the uncertain light of the cavern, I made him out to be a great towering creature. His hands are thin and the flesh is stretched over the bones like leather."

People feared black damp in the long empty galleries of the mine so much that even a reward of $500 for the wild man, dead or alive, failed to result in his apprehension. At last Smith, accompanied by J. M. Blair and others from Mt. Pleasant, all quick with a gun, went to the cave. It was late in the afternoon. Smith had the others stand back 200 yards from the mouth of the cave and entered alone, armed only with his large hunting knife. His dog followed him.

Fought for Hour in Damp Cave.

Night fell and the watchers waited in vain for Smith's return. Then there was a great noise and the dog ran out whimpering. The men went into the cavern in search of Smith. They groped along through the twisting passageways in the darkness, but were unable to find any trace of him. At midnight Smith crawled from the cave on his hands and knees and fell faint and exhausted at the feet of his friends.

"I did not get more than 50 feet into the cave boys," he said, as they carried him to the doctors, "when I saw the wild man glaring at me a few feet away. Then he sprang at me and held me in his steel-like grip. I tried to knife him but he held my wrist. For more than an hour we fought together on the wet floor of the cave. "I weakened and he slipped from my grip. I felt his hot breath on my face and then a heavy blow on my head knocked me unconscious. I don't know what happened after that. When I get well I'll make another attempt, and next time I'll get him."

HER FACE TORTURES SLAYER

Murdered Girl's Image Forced Man to Confess Choking Her and Throwing Her in Pool.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Declaring his soul was tortured by a vision of a "face which is with me night and day," George Christman, a prisoner here, has confessed to officers that he murdered Leona Mayfield of New York city Aug. 11.

Christman strangled the girl with a necktie while they were riding in an automobile with an ex-convict, according to his story. The two men threw her body into a pool when they saw she was dead, he said.

New York city police report that the body of a woman had been found in the pool Christman mentioned. Christman is being held for a violation of the state motor vehicle law. He will be sent to New York city if his story is confirmed.

A "balanced diet" may sound confusing to many people

The facts, as explained here, are simple.

The secret of a "balanced diet" is to have food containing all the elements needed for proper nutrition. These elements are protein, to nourish the tissues; starch and sugar to furnish energy; fat to supply heat; and mineral salts to provide the material necessary for building nerves, brain, and tooth and bone structure.

Grape-Nuts, the nourishing cereal made of whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with cream or milk, is a complete food for young and old alike.

Go to your grocer today and get a package of Grape-Nuts. Eat it with milk or cream for breakfast; or with stewed fruit, jelly or jam, as a delicious dessert for lunch or dinner.

HELP INVALIDS TO FORGET

Presence of a Canary or Goldfish in the Sickroom Invariably Has Beneficial Effect.

Next time you sit in a room, the furnishings of which include a bowl of goldfish, consider how much time you spend watching the small fish as they swim slowly about or dart about in pursuit of each other.

Probably you will conclude you were indulging the usual tendency of the normal person to be attracted to moving objects. In sick persons and convalescents this tendency is more pronounced, and in the aged and very young it is still more so.

That psychology of this attraction was given by Dr. Edward N. Leavy, formerly veterinarian to the animals in Central park zoo. He is now connected with a Fifth avenue pet store. "Sick persons lying in bed spend a great deal of time watching the goldfish in an aquarium in their room," he said. "It takes their minds off their pains and aches and is very beneficial."

Help Your Kidneys Fight That Cold!

Winter Colds and Chills Weaken the Kidneys and Are the Direct Cause of Many Serious Kidney Disorders

Is winter-time your backache-time? Does every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day?

Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. They overload the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys have to filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder then, that every cold

finds you suffering with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities.

But don't worry! Simply realize that your kidneys are overworked at such times and need assistance. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills today and give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Assist them also by drinking pure water freely, eating lightly, and getting plenty of fresh air and rest. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

L. W. COX, Westover, Md., says: "My kidneys were weak for a long time. I had backaches and such a soreness across my kidneys I couldn't bend or stoop. Colds settled on my kidneys and I also had bladder trouble. I doctored for some time and was told I would have to have one of my kidneys taken out. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I used them. They relieved all signs of the trouble."

MRS. WALKER CAMPBELL, 707 Pendleton St., Alexandria, Va., says: "A cold settled in my kidneys. I had such pains I could hardly catch my breath sometimes. When I bent it was hard to straighten, the pain was so bad. My kidneys acted very irregularly. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. Though that was over two years ago, I have had no return of kidney trouble."

Take your own case: If you don't know for sure whether tea or coffee is harming you, you do know that many are harmed by the drug element in tea and coffee, and that headaches, nervousness, or high blood pressure are symptoms which often tell that the drug, caffeine, is giving the nervous system too much jolt.

Probably you know, too, that some people can't drink a cup of tea or coffee at bed-time, and sleep well that night.

Where many have been harmed by tea and coffee, and you may be harmed, isn't it well to put the benefit of the doubt on your side before doubt becomes an unpleasant certainty?

There's charm without harm in Postum—a pure cereal beverage, rich in flavor, fully satisfying; the favorite table drink of thousands.

Suppose you try giving yourself this benefit today, and keep up the test for ten days; then judge the results. See if you don't feel better and work better. You can get Postum wherever good food and drink are sold or served.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 30 minutes.

AWARDED $10,000 DAMAGES

A verdict of $10,000 was awarded Robert E. Sheads, of Gettysburg, against Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads, by a jury in the Adams county court Wednesday after deliberating an hour as the result of an automobile accident at the High street crossing of the P. RR. in Hanover on December 20, 1918. Sheads was in a party going from Gettysburg to Hanover to witness a basketball game. The car in which they were riding was struck by a locomotive and Sheads, who was alone in the rear seat, had his right arm so badly injured that amputation was necessary. He was forced to abandon his intention of becoming a civil engineer. The other members of the party J. M. Bender, the driver, and Guy Beard, escaped serious injury.

Upon hearing the verdict, Charles Kain, of the law firm of Cochran, Williams & Kain, York, entered a motion for a new trial. The court will allow them time to file the motion and if refused, the case will be appealed to the Superior court, it is believed.

Sheds, who has been taking a post graduate course in education at Gettysburg College, in preparation to teaching, will continue until his graduation in June.

RAPIDLY GROWING PLANT

It is with pleasure we note the rapid advancement of the business of D. J. Riley, owner of the general repair and acetylene welding plant, in rear of No. 18 York street, Hanover.

Beginning this business in October 1906, in a small shed at the present location, Mr. Riley, through square dealing and first-class work has built up a plant at present housed in a building 100x75 feet which is none too large for the growing business. The plant is equipped with first-class machinery consisting of lathes, milling machinery, power-saws, electric drills, welding outfits and is in every respect capable of making quick repairs to all metal parts night or day. This is the largest shop in Hanover doing welding and repairing.

Mr. Riley also carries a full stock of pulleys, hangers, shafting, pipes, machine and auto bolts of all sizes and everything pertaining to machinery, steam heating, welding and pipe-fitting.

Several months ago Mr. Riley acquired the services of Harry C. Matthews, well-known locally as an expert machinist.

Defining Their Efforts.
"Hello, old chap," cried Meadows. "Haven't seen you for an age. How are you getting on with those new neighbors of yours? I hear they are musical."

"Are what?" asked Flatleigh, cynically.

"Who said that?"

"Oh, I heard it. Is it not so?"

"Well, I suppose he likes to fiddle, and the wife likes to yell, if that's what you mean."—London Answers.

Didn't Recognize Him.
Gordon married a widow with eight children, who, in course of time, presented him with ten children. One evening he found in the street where he lived a little boy, weeping bitterly.

"What's the matter, little man?" inquired Gordon, caressing him.

"I've lost my way," sobbed the youngster.

"Then come home with me. I'll give you something to eat and take care of you."

Accordingly, our kind-hearted friend took the little fellow home, and said to his wife:

"See, dear, I have brought you this child. I found him all alone in the street. One more or less won't make much difference; we will treat him as if he were our own."

"Why, you stupid! Don't you know him? It's our Percy!"—Columbus Dispatch.

SHE SUFFERED FOR FOUR LONG YEARS AFTER OPERATION

She Took Earle's Hypo-Cod and Now Recommends It. Mother Also Took This Tonic.

"I suffered from a nervous, rundown condition, due to an abdominal operation four years ago. My symptoms were bilious attacks, the formation of gas on my stomach every night on retiring, belching of wind, and the worst of all was sleeplessness and bronchitis. I secured Hypo-Cod because my mother, who had been in a rundown condition for years, took it and found it a wonderful help to her, and I thought it might help me.

"My relief through the use of this tonic was that I am not now annoyed with the gas formation during the night, am not so dreadfully troubled with sleeplessness, or bilious and the ailments previously mentioned. My nerves are much improved, which is a Godsend, for the past years were a horrible nightmare.

"I have recommended this medicine's great merits to many of my friends because it has helped me and my dear mother back to health. A sister of mine has just recovered from an operation and I have advised her to use Hypo-Cod, too, and she has consented most willingly, and I trust it will bring her health back as it has brought mother's and mine. My mother's name is Mrs. Mary A. Quinter, 227 Water St., Pottstown, Pa. My sister's name is Miss Margaret Keim, 536 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa., declared Mrs. Hester G. Bach, 536 N. 19th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

"Thousands of users, old and young, have found that Hypo-Cod is an ideal tonic, that works so quickly, is so pleasant to taste and puts you back on your feet days and weeks sooner, according to their statements. Druggists, chemists and experts assert that the formula which is on each bottle is good. Take home a bottle with you tonight and see how nicely it does the work.

Earle's Hypo-Cod is sold by all good druggists.—Adv.

SLEUTHS' INTUITION AT FAULT

Investigation of Suitcase Convinced Them That They Had Stumbled On a Misleading Cue.

Two federal prohibition field agents were seated in a train bound from North Vernon to Indianapolis.

"Ah, ha!" exclaimed one, as he nudged his companion in the ribs.

"Look!"

The two thereupon watched an elderly colored couple. The man had a suitcase which seemed heavy, and he handled it gingerly as he placed it under the seat. The agents studied the situation and then decided to act.

"Excuse me," said one of the agents addressing the colored man, "we will have to bother you to let us see what you have in that suitcase."

"Yes, sir; yes, sir," came the reply. "Help yourself."

Expectantly the agents opened the suitcase and peered within. It contained six cans of home-preserved fruit.—Indianapolis News.

The Iron Hand.

"Of course there is no such thing as woman's supremacy."

"Think not? From the time a boy sits under a street-light playing with toads until he is blind and old and toothless he has to explain to some woman why he didn't come home earlier."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GUINEA FOWL IN GREATER DEMAND

Of Big Value in Various Sections as Substitute for Many Game Birds.

MAKES GOOD AS POLICEMAN

Hotels and Restaurants in Large Cities Eager to Secure Young Birds Which Are Tender and of Fine Flavor.

The great majority of guinea fowl are raised in small flocks of from 10 to 25 upon farms in the Middle West and in the South, but a few of the large poultry raisers, particularly those who are within easy reach of the large Eastern markets, make a practice of raising a hundred or so guineas each year. Many farmers keep a pair or a trio of guineas more as a novelty than for profit, and from these a small flock is raised.

Warns of Marauders. The guinea fowl doubtless would be more popular on farms were it not for its harsh and, at times, seemingly never-ending cry, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Peculiar Cry of Guinea Gives Warning of Marauding in Poultry Yard.

Agriculture. However, some people look on this cry as an argument in the guinea's favor, as it gives warning of marauders in the poultry yard. Similarly, their pugnacious disposition while sometimes causing disturbances among the other poultry also makes them show fight against hawks and other common enemies, so that guineas sometimes are kept as guards over the poultry yard. Often a few guineas are raised with a flock of turkeys and allowed to roost in the same tree, where they can give warning if any theft is attempted during the night.

Used as Substitute.

The value of the guinea fowl as a substitute for game birds such as grouse, partridge, quail and pheasant is becoming more and more recognized by those who are fond of this class of meat and the demand for these fowls is increasing steadily. Many hotels and restaurants in the large cities are eager to secure prime young guineas, and often they are served at banquets and club dinners as a special delicacy. When well cooked, guineas are attractive in appearance, although darker than common fowls, and the flesh of young birds is tender and of especially fine flavor, resembling that of wild game. Like all other fowl, old guineas are very likely to be tough and rather dry.

RIDDING HENHOUSE OF MITES

Cleanliness and Disinfection Required to Destroy Parasites That Live on Fowls.

To rid the henhouse of the little red mite that stunts the hens so much requires cleanliness and disinfecting. The fith must be cleaned up, the house ventilated and the sunlight let in. Removable roosts and drop boards will help clean up the house. To disinfect the roosts and house everything should be painted or sprayed with a solution of two parts of oil and one part of stock dip. Applications should be made in pairs about five or six days apart in order to kill the mites that have hatched since the last spraying.

GREAT ASSISTANCE OF BIRDS

Little Feathered Songsters Do Much Toward Good Crop of Fruit by Devouring Insects.

A good crop of birds goes a long way toward a good crop of fruit. Encourage the children to feed the birds during the cold, stormy weather and in spring they will pay you a hundred-fold by clearing the orchards of insect pests.

SQUEALING PIG BEST

The pig that keeps still is the pig that sucks the most swill runs, a saying. Maybe so, but we have observed that the hungry porker who is always complaining to high heaven about his appetite usually proves a growl-thrifty, thrifter, and consequently more profitable individual than his tongue-tied brother.

CUSTOMERS SECURED FOR POULTRY SHOWS

Persons at Summer Resorts Buy Produce in Winter.

City People Have Inspected Producer's Farm and Know Under What Conditions Foodstuffs Are Raised.—One Case Cited.

Many producers living near summer resorts supply produce in the summer months to the persons at the resorts, and during the other months of the year ship produce to these persons while they are in the city. This, say marketing specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, is one of the best methods of obtaining customers for direct marketing, as the producer and consumer have some acquaintance. In most instances the customers have been at the producer's farm and know under what conditions the articles are produced.

One man who lives near a summer resort in Indiana is about twelve miles from the nearest town of any size. He does not desire to drive to this town to dispose of his farm produce and is not satisfied with the prices that the hucksters pay. Consequently he built up a business of supplying products to resorters in the summer and of shipping produce by parcel post and express to these persons at their city homes in the winter.

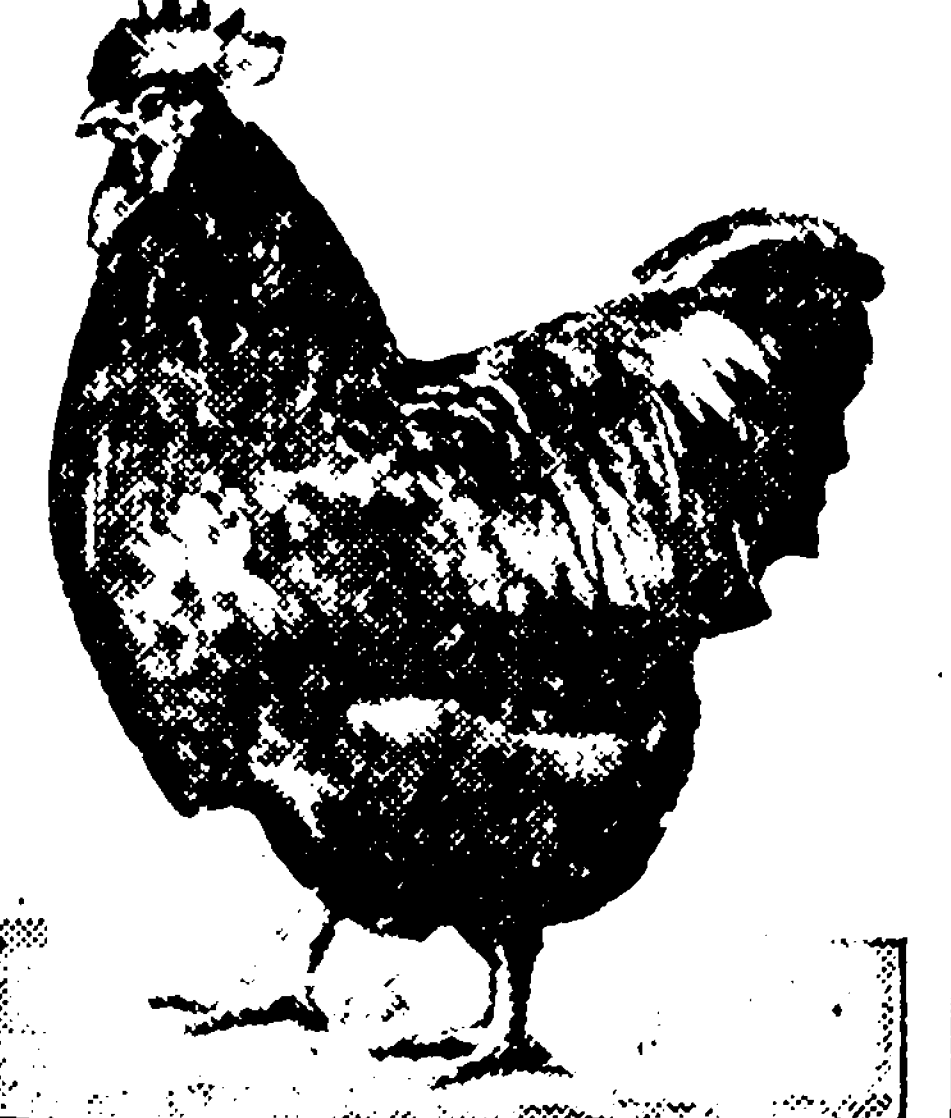

The principal products shipped are butter, eggs and dressed poultry. This producer uses good shipping containers and packs produce attractively. As he is acquainted with his customers, he renders statements of accounts only once a month. In this way the matter of making payments is simplified for the customers.

This producer has had no trouble in establishing his business nor in retaining customers. He states that his only trouble has been in getting enough high-grade produce to supply all of his customers.

OBTAIN BEST HATCHING EGGS

One Male Should Be Used With Every 15 Hens of Breeds Like Orpingtons or Rocks.

The male must be in the flock from ten to fourteen days before the eggs laid can be used for hatching purposes. After the male has been removed from the flock, hatchable eggs will be laid for about three weeks thereafter. To secure good, hatchable eggs, provide one male to every twenty leghorn or other egg breeds; use one male to every fifteen Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes or Orpingtons, and one male to each twelve Langshans, Brahmas or other meat breeds.

BARIUM POISONOUS TO RATS

Tests Indicate That a 20 Per Cent Mixture With Food Makes Most Satisfactory Bait.

A study of barium carbonate as a rat poison, made by the United States Department of Agriculture, indicates that a 20 per cent mixture with food makes a satisfactory bait. With this percentage a rat ordinarily needs to eat only one-third or three-eighths of a meal of average size to get a fatal dose. It was found that with this dose many of the rats poisoned died within 24 hours, though an occasional rat was found which survived an even larger amount, thus indicating that 100 per cent mortality is not to be expected in any case.

A summary of results of experiments conducted by various persons with a view to determining the deadliness of barium to different animals shows the fallacy of the assumption that barium is poisonous only to rats. It is pointed out that the fatal dose of barium per pound tends to decrease relatively as the size of the animal increases, and that a bait calculated to be fatal to rats may be assumed to be more or less dangerous to small domestic animals also.

SUCCULENT FEED FOR FOWLS

Now That Good Qualities of Forages Are Well Known Hens Should Be Given Ample Supply.

Everyone knows that a hen lays best when she gets the succulent grasses that first shoot out of the earth in spring. Most successful feeders use in their mash a base of some heavy, nonfattening, yet nutritious food. For a long time the best feeders of the country used wheat bran for this base, but now that the good qualities of forages are well known the hill of fare should be changed to suit.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

MOTHER THROWS OUT OIL STOVE

A narrow escape from death or serious injury to a mother and two small children by fire occurred Thursday at the home of George Myers, residing along the Lincoln Highway, below Farmers. Mrs. Myers with her two-days' old baby was lying in bed in at upstairs room and her 4-year-old son Paul was playing alongside a coal oil stove which was used to heat the apartment, when the boy accidentally upset the stove which burst into flames. As Mr. Myers and his sister were in the barn doing the morning's milking, the mother, with great courage and presence of mind, arose from bed, and snatching up the blazing stove carried it out of doors. When Dr. Eugene Elkin, East Berlin, her attending physician, called at the home a short time after the incident, he found Mrs. Myers none the worse, outside of fright, from her adventure.

An interesting operation in skin-grafting was performed at the Warner hospital Thursday on Edw. McSherry, of Gettysburg. A wound which he received sometime ago while working at the Oyler & Spangler fertilizer plant, east of Gettysburg, never healed and skin-grafting was resorted to. The sore is on his left leg and skin was taken from another part of his body. About three square inches were used in the operation.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take 2 or 3 times a day to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as they are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Newadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus driving a cold from the system.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB BACKACHE AND LUMBAGO RIGHT OUT

Rub Pain and Stiffness away with a small bottle of old honest St. Jacobs Oil

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 35 cent bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into the pain or ache, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the ache and pain right out of your back and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly!

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

'CAUSE HE LOVED HER SO

Burning love messages sent to Mrs. Levi D. Rife, of Gettysburg, sent by Constable Christian W. Yungst, of Middletown, were the basis of the evidence in the suit brot in the Dauphin county court Wednesday by Levi D. Rife alleging alienation of his wife's affections by the Middletown officer of the law. The jury Thursday returned a verdict of $1,000 in favor of Mr. Rife, the plaintiff. Eight love notes in all were presented by Mr. Rife. He alleged they were written by Mr. Yungst to his wife. Yungst maintained he had only a speaking acquaintance with Mrs. Rife, and wrote but one letter to her. He is a widower with grown children. Mrs. Rife is in her thirties.

The salutations in the letters varied from "Dear Friend" to "Dear, My Only Nellie." In one of them, which Rife's lawyer, James G. Hatz, characterized as "soft and mushy", Yungst sent a "standpipe full of kisses," and in another he offered "a million tons of kisses." Those in the courtroom giggled as the lawyer read the first of the letters, which said in part: "I want to pay for that divorce; I can hardly be without you. Just think of it, the one I love is 58 miles away from me." Tipstaves had to rap for order when the attorney read: "The violet is red, the rose is blue and I have a kiss for you." In the second letter the attorney quoted Yungst as writing: "I could hardly leave you yesterday; I wish you could be with me, 'cause I love you so. Don't forget to go to town and see about the divorce."

A Judicious Inquiry.—A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade, says he has often heard druggists ask a customer, who wished to buy a cough medicine, whether it was for a child or an adult and if for a child, they almost invariably recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it and for colds, croup and whooping cough it is unsurpassed.

NO REST-NO PEACE
There's no peace and little rest for the one who suffers from a bad back, and distressing urinary disorders. People around here recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor. Be guided by their experience.

Mrs. Mary A. Gilbert, 150 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "My health was in a bad condition for some time, caused by disordered kidneys. I wasn't able to sleep much and what rest I got didn't seem to refresh me. My back and head ached and frequently I'd get dizzy spells and chills. When I caught cold, these symptoms became worse. One of the family advised me to get Doan's Kidney Pills and I bought a supply. Doan's certainly do just as advertised, for they gave me prompt relief in every way."

OVER SIX YEARS LATER, Mrs. Gilbert added: "My opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills hasn't changed and I can, therefore, recommend them as highly as ever. I gladly back up my former statements."

TAX FOR NEW LIBRARY

The Adams County Library Association was formed at an enthusiastic meeting of representatives from all parts of the county, held in the office of County Superintendent Roth, on Thursday afternoon. Miss Anna C. McDonald, of the State Library, Harrisburg, gave advice in the forming of the association. Rev. Ralph W. Baker, of Fairfield, was elected secretary and Rev. D. W. Woods, near Gettysburg, president. Miss McDonald then explained that a new State law provides for the financial support, both to establish and maintain county libraries, the act permitting the County Commissioners to appropriate funds equal to two mills on the assessable property in the county. However, this appropriation must be renewed every year unless authorized permanently by a vote of the people. Miss McDonald further stated that the new organization in this county could rely on the State Library for assistance that it was in their power to give and that it would also be possible to borrow some books from that library.

In a general discussion, it was brought out that the plans of the local organization would probably include 10 central stations in the larger centers of the county and about 12 other deposit centers. The large central station will be located in Gettysburg and there it will be necessary to employ a trained librarian, an assistant and stenographer. A preliminary budget, including the salaries of the necessary librarians and possibly rentals for some stations was tentatively placed at three-fourths of a mill on the county property. However, it was said that if the library is brought to a reality, this expenditure will be very small in comparison to results.

The following executive committee was appointed to further the plans: Rev. D. W. Woods, Dr. T. C. Miller, Prof. H. Milton Roth, Rev. Ralph W. Baker and I. L. Taylor. The entire membership of the association will comprise the committee on membership. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday in the court house. Those present at Thursday's meeting included Mrs. Grace Taylor Himes, Mrs. M. J. Ehrhart, Mrs. Marjorie Gerber Barnitz and Mrs. Kate W. Himes, New Oxford, and Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown.

Capper-Fess Education Bill Another Raid on the National Treasury

By SENATOR LAWRENCE C. PHIPPS of Colorado.

One of the most effective arguments against the enactment of the so-called Capper-Fess physical education bill is the amount of annual appropriation required to put the provisions of the measure into effect. To some, of course, it may seem niggardly to advance such a reason in opposition to such a bill. I know it has been quite the custom, for some years past, to speak in terms of billions when referring to the United States treasury, and to scoff at an annual outlay of $10,000,000 or $11,000,000, the sum provided for in this bill, as unworthy of serious consideration.

The fact remains that our people are staggering under a heavy load of taxation, and that it is the part of patriotism to cut necessary government expenditures to the bone.

This is not all. I submit that the proposed legislation does not, as purported, fill a crying need of which has long been neglected. I contend that the principle behind this measure is no new thing and that the passage of this bill is not necessary for the physical welfare of the boys and girls of this country. The "health supervisors and school nurses" mentioned in the bill could do nothing in my opinion, which cannot be as well performed by the school teachers themselves while at the same time imparting literary and business knowledge.

There are different schools of medicine, different views as to the art of healing; and the American citizen generally was unwilling to submit to an encroachment upon his own privileges and duties toward his children, to consent to have the government, even his own government, extend paternalistic aid through another bureau in Washington.

Roosevelt-Sequoia Must Be Protected Against the Water Power Act

By W. F. BADE, MRS. J. D. SHERMAN, G. B. GRINNELL.

William F. Bade, President Sierra Club—The Sierra club, as the first proposer of the Roosevelt-Sequoia National park, cannot support the Barbour bill unless it is amended so as to bring the new park under the protection given by the Jones-Esch act to existing national parks. We must oppose the policy of two kinds of parks as wrong in principle and dangerous in practice. Our representative in Washington is instructed to work only for a park exempt from power privilege.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, Chairman Department of Applied Education, General Federation of Women's Clubs—The policy of the General Federation of Women's clubs is the complete conservation of the National Parks and Monuments, and all national park projects which it supports must be based on this principle. We are therefore opposed to the Barbour bill. The federation strongly favored the project for a Roosevelt-Sequoia National park before the passage of the Jones-Esch bill, but we cannot now continue our support while it is subject to the Water Power act. Unless the bill is amended to give full protection from the provisions of the Water Power act we shall be compelled to do our utmost to defeat it.

Resolution of National Parks Committee, National Council of 22 Eastern and Western Associations—Resolved: That in the opinion of this committee, the Barbour bill (H. R. 7452) to create the Roosevelt-Sequoia National park should be so amended as to protect the entire area included within the park from water power developments in the same manner that all existing national parks are protected; and that this committee favors the creation of such a park if thus protected, and opposes the establishment of any national park without such protection.—George Bird Grinnell, Chairman; John B. Burnham, Secretary.

Terrible Indictment of Civilization: Plenty Here; Starvation There

By HENRY C. WALLACE, Secretary of Agriculture.

It is a terrible indictment of modern civilization that with such abundance here there are millions of people overseas suffering for the bare necessities and other millions starving to death. The purchasing power of our major grain crop is little more than half what it was on an average for the five prewar years of 1910-1914, inclusive.

This in turn has forced the manufacturer to restrict his output to the lessened demand, reducing his own purchases of raw material, and greatly reducing the number of his workmen. Men out of work must live on their savings and are in turn compelled to practice economy by reducing their own buying, and thus still further restrict the farmer's market. And so we find ourselves in a vicious circle which we are having difficulty in breaking through.

Watch Your Step: Pedestrians Must Not Make Automobilists Nervous

By O. L. DU PRE, in Science and Invention.

Pedestrians crossing streets at night shall wear a white light in front and a red light in the rear.

Before turning to the right or left they shall give three short blasts on a horn at least three inches in diameter.

When an inexperienced automobile driver is made nervous by a pedestrian, he shall indicate the same, and the pedestrian shall hide behind a tree until the automobile has passed.

Pedestrians shall not carry in their pockets any sharp instruments which may cut automobile tires.

In dodging automobiles pedestrians shall not run more than seven miles an hour.

Pedestrians must register at the beginning of each year and pay a license fee of $5 for the privilege of living. There shall be no rebate if an automobile runs over them before the end of the year.

Pedestrians will be held responsible for all damages done to automobiles or their occupants by collision with such pedestrians.

The Right Thing at the Right Time

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

Words are the shadows of actions.—Democritus.

HEY, GOBS!

PERHAPS in nothing else are the fashion and custom of the age so distinctly characterized as in the use of words. Any student of the language—any language, in fact—can tell the approximate date of the authorship of any writing by the choice of the words it contains. You know yourself how easy it is to recognize Shakespeare from his word choice—or at least, how differently Shakespeare and his contemporaries wrote from the way Sir Walter Scott and O. Henry, respectively, wrote.

Now, the words we choose to express our thoughts are, to a large extent, chosen because they are the correct words to use. There are styles and fashions in word usage, as there are in the method of writing letters and holding the knife, and we reflect the fashion of our own day.

Our grandmothers and grandfathers used a far more stilted form than we do. Not only does it sound stilted, because it is out of date, but it actually was a more formal and stilted usage. Slang, in those days, was not indulged in by the well bred. Today, say what we will against the use of slang, it is not a sign of bad breeding. And, although we may caution our sweet young daughters against using slang, still we cannot keep them from recognizing it as part and parcel of the present-day English tongue.

Not long ago, some big billboards inviting the sailors anchored in the Hudson river to the various festivals in the way of dances and feasts which New York city had prepared for them, began with the words, "Hey, Gobs!" The posters went on to specify time and place and variety of the entertainments.

Now, can anybody imagine a Civil War bulletin of invitation to the blue-jackets of the day beginning with the words, "Hey, Gobs?" No; that was a day of more stilted language, and a slangy address to the sailors would have been quite undignified.

There are times today, of course, when we should avoid slang. Slang does sound cheap from a dignified matron. Too much slang shows a certain lack of imagination on the part of the user, anyway. But a stilted usage of words is quite unnecessary.

Of course, if you are writing to the diplomatic representative of a foreign government, for instance, asking what openings exist in his country for workers in some industry, you should couch your letter of inquiry in dignified language—even formal language. If you are making an address bestowing a gift, you would likewise use formal phraseology that might almost be termed stiff. And you wouldn't think, of course, in sending out invitations for a dinner party, of starting them off: "Hey, friend!" But the day of stilted language for any save the purely formal, almost documentary, communication, is gone. We talk easily and naturally, nowadays, and the fewer verbal flourishes we include in the better.

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ANTOINETTE

THE average person, Antoinette and Annette are regarded as closely related—the former is thought to be merely an elaboration of the latter. But such is not the case. Annette, which will be discussed later, comes from the Hebrew, while Antoinette is of Roman extraction. It means "inestimable" and is said to have originated with Antius, a son of Hercules.

Several distinguished Roman families bore the name of Antonius and its first famous exponent was Mark Anthony, avenger of Caesar and lover of Cleopatra. It received a reputation for sanctity through St. Anthony, the great hermit of the Fourth century.

The feminine form Antonia made its appearance in Italy, also, and in Spain, where it still is popular. The Germans adopted it as Antoinette, but the French are responsible for the charming Antoinette which is forever plating the fate of lovely Marie Antoinette, queen of Louis XVI.

The French later contracted Antoinette to Toinette, a popular form throughout the country. Toinette is also sometimes used as a diminutive. Italy has an Antoinetta and an Antonica. Antonia and Antonetta are the favorite equivalents in Sweden.

The garnet is Antoinette's talismanic stone. It possesses many of the powers of the ruby, whose flaming heart it so closely imitates. It promises its wearer courage, a dauntless heart, and success in every ambition. Friday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

Pola Negri

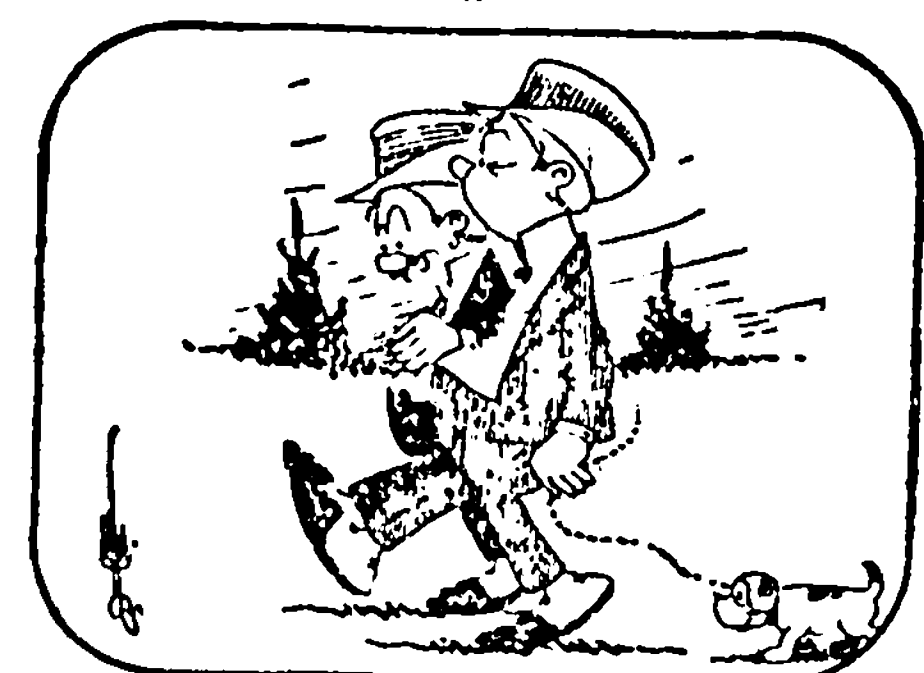

The rise of this bewitching European "movie" star was spectacular and interesting. Born in Posen, Poland, 28 years ago, and formerly a shopgirl in a German department store, she craved the stage. She could dance and play the violin. She joined the Russian Imperial Ballet. Later she was discovered by a film director. Fame and fortune now are hers. Pola Negri is married to a Polish nobleman and bears the title of "Countess."

GOOD SCHEME

"Don't you think the result of the women voting will just reverse the men's vote? You know every wife'll vote opposite from her husband."

OLD TABBY'S LESSON

GRANDMA TABBY had had her day at catching mice and rats, and now she was getting old, and as her kind mistress gave her plenty of milk and cream, she did not need to hunt for her food.

Grandma Tabby's eyes were bright and her wits sharp, even if she did not hunt, and she decided she would give good advice to all the young kittens in the neighborhood about hunting mice and rats.

So all the Mother Pussies brought their children to Grandma Tabby to learn wisdom from her in the art of mice catching and hunting.

"You first of all," said Grandma Tabby, "must not eat too much. When I was young I seldom had any milk or cream. I had to work for my food. There is nothing better for young kittens than exercise. Just look at me at my age, my dears."

All the kittens looked at Grandma's fine, soft coat of fur and hoped some day they would have one like it.

"There is another rule you must follow, too," she said. "Never give up when you see a mouse until you have caught it. You must not expect your mistress to feed you. She gives you a home, and you should pay for this by keeping her house free from mice.

"If it is the barn you have to care for, instead of the house, just keep a sharp eye on the bags of corn and grain, and remember that watchful waiting has its reward."

All the little kittens listened with up-standing ears and wide-open eyes to all that Grandma Tabby was saying, for well they knew that such wisdom as hers was hard to find.

"Now, there are the rats," she said; "all pussies cannot catch rats, but the big ones can if they are brave, and my advice to you is this: When you see a rat look for a trap, there is sure to be one around; then all you have to do is to keep that rat from getting back to his hole."

"Chase him toward the trap, and when he finds he cannot get home he will run into the trap, you may be sure, and there you have him."

"Chasing rats into traps is just as clever as catching them, but never let a mouse go into a trap. Remember that it is a disgrace to any Puss to have a mouse caught in a trap in the house where it lives."

"I have heard the saying, 'Mind your P's and Q's,' but that is not for Pussies; you must mind your M's and R's, and if you do this you will become good mousers and rat hunters, which is the ambition of all well-brought-up kittens."

As all the kittens trotted home behind their mothers they looked so wise that any mouse or rat would have run for its life, I am sure, but he would never have escaped, so well did they learn from Grandma Tabby how to hunt.

PIGS IN WINTER

"Grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky, "I will be glad when the spring comes again so I can be out in the mud and can dig into the ground in the hope that I may find more to eat."

"I do not care so much for the winter and the old barn."

"Well," said Sammy Sausage, "what are you going to do about it? Squeal, squeal, will you answer that question for me?"

"Cheer Up, Porky." "There is nothing to be done about it as far as I can see, grunt, grunt," said Pinky Pig.

"Nothing at all," said Miss Ham. "Squeal, squeal, there's nothing to be done about it at all."

"You might just as well not think about it," said Master Pinky Pig. "Squeal, squeal, that's what I say."

"Better think of something else, grunt, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon.

"There will be winter whether you like it or not," said Mrs. Pink Pig. "Squeal, squeal, that is the truth."

"It is indeed the truth," said Pinky Pig's mother. "Grunt, grunt, it is the truth."

"Just cheer up, Porky," said Miss Ham, "and think of the spring that is coming and the mud that there will be. There is always mud in the spring."

"Ah," said Porky, "I know all that, and I know, too, that there is no sense whatever in wishing it were spring when it is summer."

"For winter won't oblige a nice old pig like that. I know winter won't."

"But oh, pig friends, it is not only because I have no mud to dig in that I feel badly, but because I cannot bear to look out of the barn window and see that white, clean-looking snow."

"I don't like the snow."

"Now they say that in some places the snow gets dirty. Then I have more respect for the snow."

"I've seen the snow get dirty towards spring, but then it was being sensible anyway to let spring come in its place. So it begins then being more sensible by letting itself get dirty."

"But in the winter to look at all that whiteness—just miles and miles of whiteness! Oh dear, what a wretched view is that for a pig."

"I don't care to look at all the clean-white snow. I don't care for such a sight at all."

"Neither do we, grunt, grunt," said the other pigs.

"Ah, we all think the same about it. We all do! I am glad of that," said Grandfather Porky. "I look out with my little eyes and I say to myself: 'What ridiculous clean white stuff snow is!'"

"Well," said Miss Ham, "at least I don't suppose any one ever described snow in just that fashion."

"I don't suppose so," said Grandfather Porky Pig, "because everyone isn't a pig, and everyone can't talk or squeal or grunt as a pig can."

"Most creatures can only say that it is cold in the winter or that there has been a storm or that there is going to be a storm, or that they have had to get extra coal or wood, or that they feel very cold."

"But it takes a pig to properly describe the winter, and it takes Grandfather Porky Pig to do it in perfect fashion."

"Yes, snow is ridiculous clean white stuff. It isn't good to eat. It likes to be clean rather than dirty."

"It is cold and tiresome, and it can't be chewed or swallowed."

"Of course, it can be swallowed if any one wants to swallow it. But if we had a lot of pig weed 'Wretched View,' spreading itself all over the ground in the winter instead of snow—that would be something like!"

"Something like?" asked Miss Ham. "Something like—what?"

"That would be something worth while," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "But, of course, I might as well be cheery and not think of it, for the winter isn't going to pay any attention to what I say."

A Jacob's ladder was hanging over the side of the schooner as the canoe shot in under her lee quarter, and half a minute later the expectant Nells stepped upon her deck. A tall dark man, wearing an ancient palmleaf hat, sat smoking on the hatch coming, and him Nells Halvorsen addressed.

"Aye bane want to see Cap'n Scraggs," he said.

The tall dark man stood erect and cast a quick, questioning look at Nells Halvorsen. He hesitated before he made answer.

"What do you want?" he asked deliberately, and there was a subtle menace in his tones. As for Nells Halvorsen, thinking only of the surprise he had in store for his old employer, he replied evasively:

"Aye bane want job."

"Well, I'm Captain Scraggs, and I haven't any job for you. Get off my boat and wait until you're invited before you come aboard again."

For nearly a minute Nells Halvorsen stared open-mouthed at the spurious Captain Scraggs, while slowly there sifted through his brain the notion that he had happened across the track of a deep and bloody mystery of the seas. There was "something rotten in Denmark." Of that Nells Halvorsen was certain. More he could not be certain of until he had paved the way for a complete investigation, and as a preliminary step toward that end he clinched his fist and sprang swiftly toward the bogus skipper.

"Aye tank you bane d—n liar," he muttered, and struck home, straight and true, to the point of the jaw. The man went down, and in an instant Nells was on top of him. Off came the sailor's belt, the hands of the half-stunned man were quickly tied behind him, and before he had time to realize what had happened Nells had cut a length of cord from a trailing halyard and tied his feet securely, after which he gagged him with his bandana handkerchief.

A quick circuit of the ship convinced Nells Halvorsen that the remainder of the dastard crew were evidently ashore, so he descended to the cabin in search of further evidence of crime. He was quite prepared to find Captain Scraggs' master's certificate in its familiar oaken frame, hanging on the cabin wall, but he was dumfounded to observe, hanging on the wall in a similar and equally familiar frame, the certificate of Adelbert P. Gibney as first mate of steam or sail, any ocean and any tonnage. But still a third framed certificate hung on the wall, and Nells again scratched his head when he read the wording that set forth the legal qualifications of Bartholomew McGuffey to hold down a job as chief engineer of coastwise vessels up to 1,200 tons net register.

It was patent, even to the dull-witted Swede, that there had been foul play somewhere, and the schooner's log, lying open on the table, seemed to offer the first means at hand for a solution of the mystery. Eagerly Nells turned to the last entry. It was not in Captain Scraggs' handwriting, and contained nothing more interesting than the stereotyped reports of daily observations, currents, weather conditions, etc., including a notation of arrival that day at Honolulu. Slowly Halvorsen turned the leaves backward, until at last he was rewarded by a glimpse of a different handwriting. It was the last entry under that particular handwriting, and read as follows:

"June 21, 19—. Took an observation at noon, and find that we are in 21-48 S, 178-4 W. At this rate should hit Tuvana-tholo early this afternoon. All hands well and looking forward to the fun at Tuvana. Bent a new flying jib this morning and had the king and Tabu-Tabu holystone the deck. A. P. GIBNEY."

Nells Halvorsen sat down to think, and after several minutes of this unusual exercise it appeared to the Swede that he had stumbled upon a clue to the situation. The last entry in the log kept by Mr. Gibney was under date of June 21st—just eleven days ago, and on that date Mr. Gibney had been looking forward to some fun at Tuvana-tholo. Now where was that island and what kind of a place was it?

Nells searched through the cabin until he came across the book that is the bible of every South sea trading vessel—the British admiralty reports. Down the index went the old deck-hand's calloused finger and paused at "Friendly Islands—page 177," whereupon Nells opened the book at page 177 and after a five-minute search discovered that Tuvana-tholo was a barren, uninhabited island in latitude 21-2 south, longitude 178-49 west.

Ten days from the Friendly Islands, the paper said. That meant under power and sail with the trades abeam. It would take nearer fifteen days for the run from Honolulu to that desert island, and Nells Halvorsen wondered whether the marooned men would still be alive by the time aid could reach them. For by some sixth sailor sense Nells Halvorsen became convinced that his old friends of the vegetable trade were marooned. They had gone ashore for some kind of a frolic, and the crew had stolen the schooner and left them to their fate, believing that the castaways would never be heard from and that dead men tell no tales.

He rushed on deck, carried his prisoner down into the cabin, and locked the door on him. A minute later he was clinging to the Jacob's ladder, the canoe shot in to the side of the vessel at his gruff command and passed on shoreward without missing a stroke of the paddle. An hour later, accompanied by three Kanaka sailors picked up at random along the water front, Nells Halvorsen was pulled out to the Maggie II. Her crew had not returned and the bogus captain was still triced hard and fast in the cabin.

The Swede did not bother to investigate in detail the food and water supply. A hasty round of the schooner convinced him that she had at least a month's supply of food and water. Only one thought surged through his mind, and that was the awful necessity for haste. The anchor came in with a rush, the Kanaka boys chanting a song that sounded to Nells like a funeral dirge, and Nells went below and turned the gasoline engines wide open. The Maggie II swung around and with a long streak of opalescent foam trailing behind her swung down the bay and faded at last in the ghostly moonlight beyond Diamond head; after which Nells Halvorsen, with murder in his eye and a tarred rope's end in his horny fist, went down into the cabin and talked to the man who posed as Captain Scraggs. In the end he got a confession. Fifteen minutes later he emerged, smiling grimly, gave the Kanaka boy at the wheel the course, and turned in to sleep the sleep of the conscience-free and the weary.

Darkness was creeping over the beach at Tuvana-tholo before Mr. Gibney could smother the despair in his heart sufficient to spur his faded imagination to working order. For nearly an hour the three castaways had sat on the beach in dumb horror, gazing seaward. They were not alone in this, for a little further up the beach the two Fiji Islanders sat huddled on their haunches, gazing stupidly first at the horizon and then at their white captors. It was the sight of these two worthless that spurred Mr. Gibney's torpid brain to action.

"Didn't you say, Mac, that when we left these two cannibals alone on this island that it would develop into a case of dog eat dog or somethin' of that nature?"

Captain Scraggs sprang to his feet, his face white with a new terror. However, he had endured so much since embarking with Mr. Gibney on a life of wild adventure that his nerves had become rather inured to impending death, and presently his fear gave way to an overmastering rage. He hurled his hat on the sands and jumped on it until it was a mere shapeless rag.

"Let's call a meetin' of the Robinson Crusoe syndicate," said Mr. Gibney.

"Second the motion," rumbled McGuffey.

"Carried," said the commodore. "The first business before the meetin' is the organization of an expedition to chase these two cannibals to the other end of the island. I ain't got the heart to kill 'em, so let's chase 'em away before they get fresh with us."

"Good idea," responded McGuffey, whereupon he picked up a rock and threw it at the king. Mr. Gibney followed with two rocks, Captain Scraggs screamed defiance at the enemy, and the enemy fled in wild disorder, pursued by the syndicate. After a chase of half a mile Mr. Gibney led his cohorts back to the beach.

"Let's build a fire—not that we need it, but just for company—and sleep till mornin'. By that time my imagination'll be in workin' order and I'll scheme a breakfast out of this Godforsaken hole."

At the first hint of dawn Mr. Gibney, true to his promise, was up and scouting for breakfast. He found some gooneys on a rocky crag and killed half a dozen of them with a club. On his way back to camp he discovered a few handfuls of sea salt in a crevice between some rocks, and the syndicate breakfasted an hour later on roast gooney. It was oily and fishy but an excellent substitute for nothing at all, and the syndicate was grateful. The breakfast would have been cheerful, in fact, if Captain Scraggs had not made repeated reference to his excessive thirst. McGuffey lost patience before the meal was over, and cuffed Captain Scraggs, who thereupon subsided with tears in his eyes. This hurt McGuffey. It was like salt in a fresh wound, so he patted the skipper on the back and humbly asked his pardon. Captain Scraggs forgave him and murmured something about death making them all equal.

"The next business before the syndicate," announced Mr. Gibney, "is a search of this island for water."

They searched all forenoon. At intervals they caught glimpses of the two cannibals skulking behind sand-dunes, but they found no water. Toward the center of the island, however, the soil was less barren, and here a grove of coconut palms lifted their tufted crests invitingly.

"We will camp in this grove," said the commodore, "and keep guard over these green coconuts. There must be nearly a hundred of them and I notice a little taro root here and there. As those coconuts are full of milk, that insures us life for a week or two if we go on a short ration. By bathing several times a day we can keep down our thirst some and perhaps it'll rain."

"What if it does?" snapped Captain Scraggs bitterly. "We ain't got nothin' but our hats to catch it in."

"Well, then, Scraggsy, old stick-in-the mud," replied the commodore quizzically, "it's a cinch you'll go thirsty. Your hat looks like a cullender."

Captain Scraggs choked with rage, and Mr. Gibney, springing at the nearest palm, skinned to the top of it in the most approved sailor fashion. A moment later, instead of coconuts, rich unctuous curses began to descend on McGuffey and Scraggs.

"Gib, my dear boy," inquired Scraggs, "whatever is the matter of you?"

"That hound Tabu-Tabu's been strippin' our coconut grove," roared the commodore. "He must have spent half the night up in these trees."

"Thank the Lord they didn't take 'em all," said McGuffey piously. "Chuck me down a nut, Gib," said Captain Scraggs. "I'm famished."

In conformity with the commodore's plans, the castaways made camp in the grove. For a week they subsisted on gooneys, taro root, coconuts and coconut milk, and a sea-turtle which Scraggs found wandering on the beach. This suggested turtle eggs to Mr. Gibney, and a change of diet resulted. Nevertheless, the unaccustomed food, poorly cooked as it was, and the lack of water, told cruelly on them, and their strength failed rapidly.

At the end of a week, all hands were troubled with indigestion and McGuffey developed a low fever. They had lost much flesh and were a white, haggard-looking trio. On the afternoon of the tenth day on the island the sky clouded up and Mr. McGuffey predicted a williwaw. Captain Scraggs inquired feebly if it was good to eat.

That night it rained, and to the great joy of the marooned mariners Mr. Gibney discovered, in the center of a big sandstone rock, a natural reservoir that held about ten gallons of water. They drank to repletion and felt their strength return a thousand-fold. Tabu-Tabu and the king came into camp about this time, and pleaded for a ration of water. Mr. Gibney, swearing horribly at them, granted their request, and the king, in his gratitude, threw himself at the commodore's feet and kissed them. But Mr. Gibney was not to be deceived, and after furnishing them with a supply of water in coconut calabashes, he ordered them to their own side of the island.

On the eighteenth day the last drop of water was gone, and on the twenty-second day the last of the coconuts disappeared. The prospects of more rain were not bright. The gooneys were becoming shy and distrustful and the syndicate was experiencing more and more difficulty, not only in killing them, but in eating them. McGuffey, who had borne up uncomplainingly, was shaking with fever and hardly able to stagger down the beach to look for turtle eggs. The syndicate was sick, weak and emaciated almost beyond recognition, and on the twenty-fifth day Captain Scraggs fainted twice. On the twenty-sixth day McGuffey crawled into the shadow of a stunted mimosa bush and started to pray!

It was the finish. The commodore knew it, and sat with bowed head in his gaunt arms, wondering, wondering. Slowly his body began to sway; he muttered something, slid forward on his face, and lay still. And as he lay there on the threshold of the unknown he dreamed that the Maggie II came into view around the headland, a bone in her teeth and every stitch of canvas flying. He saw her luff up into the wind and hang there shivering; a moment later her sails came down by the run, and he saw a little splash under her port bow as her hook took bottom. There was a commotion on decks, and then to Mr. Gibney's dying ears came faintly the shouts and songs of the black boys as a whaleboat shot into the breakers and pulled swiftly toward the beach. Mr. Gibney dreamed that a white man sat in the stern sheets of this whaleboat, and as the boat touched the beach it seemed to Mr. Gibney that this man sprang ashore and ran swiftly toward him. And—Mr. Gibney twisted his suffering lips into a wry smile as he realized the oddities of this mirage—it seemed to him that this visionary white man bore a striking resemblance to Nells Halvorsen. Nells Halvorsen, of all men! Old Nells, "the squarehead" deckhand of the green-pea trade! Dull, boggleheaded Nells, with his lost dog smile and his—

Mr. Gibney rubbed his eyes feebly and half staggered to his feet. What was that? A shout? Without doubt he had heard a sound that was not the moaning of their remorseless prison-keeper, the sea. And—

"Hands off," shrieked Mr. Gibney and struck feebly at the imaginary figure rushing toward him. No use. He felt himself swept into strong arms and carried an immeasurable distance down the beach. Then somebody threw water in his face and pressed a drink of brandy and sweet water to his parched lips. His swimming senses rallied a moment, and he discovered that he was lying in the bottom of a whaleboat, McGuffey lay beside him, and on a thwart in front of him sat good old Nells Halvorsen with Captain Scraggs' head on his knees. As Mr. Gibney looked at this strange tableau Captain Scraggs opened his eyes, glanced up at Nells Halvorsen, and spoke:

"Why if it ain't old squarehead Nells," he muttered wonderingly. "If it ain't Nells, I'll go to hades or some other seaport." He closed his eyes again and subsided into a sort of lethargy, for he was content. He knew he was saved.

Mr. Gibney rolled over, and, struggling to his knees, leaned over McGuffey and peered into his drawn face. "Mac, old shipmate! Mac, speak to me. Are you alive?"

B. McGuffey, Esquire, opened a pair of glazed eyes and stared at the commodore.

"Did we lick 'em?" he whispered. "The last I remember the king was puttin' it all over Scraggsy. And that Tabu boy—was—no slouch." McGuffey paused, and glanced warily around the boat, while a dawning horror appeared in his sunken eyes. "Go back, Nells—go back—for God's sake. There's two niggers—still—on the island. Bring—em some water. They're cannibals—Nells, but never mind. Get them—aboard—the poor devils—if they're living. I wouldn't leave a crocodile on that—hell hole, if I could—help it."

An hour later the Robinson Crusoe syndicate, including the man Friday and the Goat, were safe aboard the Maggie II, and Nells Halvorsen, with the tears streaming down his bronzed cheeks, was sparingly doling out to them a mixture of brandy and water. And when the syndicate was strong enough to be allowed all the water it wanted, Nells Halvorsen propped them up on deck and told the story. When he had finished, Captain Scraggs turned to Mr. Gibney.

"Gib, my dear boy," he said, "make a motion."

"I move," said the commodore, "that we set Tabu-Tabu and the king down on the first inhabited island we can find. They've suffered enough. And I further move that we readjust the ownership of the Maggie II syndicate and cut the best Swede on earth in on a quarter of the profits."

"Second the motion," said McGuffey. "Carried," said Captain Scraggs.

CHAPTER XIV.

The lookout on the power schooner Maggie II had sighted Diamond head before Commodore Adelbert P. Gibney, Captain Phineas P. Scraggs, and Engineer Bartholomew McGuffey were enabled to declare, in all sincerity (or at least with as much sincerity as one might reasonably expect from this land of roving rascals), that they had entirely recovered from their harrowing experiences on the desert island of Tuvana-tholo, in the Friendly group.

At the shout of "Land, ho!" Mr. McGuffey yawned, stretched himself, and sat up in the wicker lounging chair where he had sprawled for days with Mr. Gibney and Captain Scraggs, under the awning on top of the house. He flexed his biceps reflectively, while his companions, stretched at full length in their respective chairs, watched him lazily.

"As a member o' the Maggie syndicate an' ownin' an' votin' a quarter interest," boomed the engineer, "I here by call a meetin' o' the said syndicate for the purpose o' transactin' any an' all business that may properly come before the meetin'."

"Pass the word for Nells Halvorsen," suggested Mr. Gibney. "Bless his squarehead soul," he added.

"We got a quorum without him, an' besides this business is just between us three."

"Meetin' come to order," The commodore tapped the hot deck with his bare heel twice. "Haul away, Mac."

"I move you, gentlemen, that it be the sense o' this meetin' that B. McGuffey, Esquire, be an' he hereby appointed a committee o' one to lam the everlastin' daylight out o' that sinful former chief mate o' ourn for abandonin' the syndicate to a horrible death on that there desert island. D' I hear a second to that motion?"

"Second the motion," chirped Captain Scraggs.

"The motion's denied," announced Mr. Gibney firmly.

"Now, looky here, Gib, that ain't fair. Didn't you fight Tabu-Tabu an' didn't Scraggsy fight the king o' Kandavu? I ain't had no fightin' this entire voyage an' I did cal'late to lick that doggone mate."

"Mac, it can't be done now."

"Oh, it can't, eh? Well, I'll just bet you two boys my interest in the syndicate."

"It ain't that, Mac. It ain't that. No body's doubtin' your natural ability to mop him up. But it ain't policy. You wasn't sore agin 'em cannibal savages, was you? You made Nells go back an' save 'em, an' it took us two days to beat up to the first inhabited island an' drop 'em off—"

It Was the Finish. The Commodore Knew It.

"But a cannibal's like a dumb beast, Gib. He ain't responsible. This mate knows better."

"Ah!" Mr. Gibney leveled a horny forefinger at the engineer. "That's where you hit the nail on the head. He's too fly, and there's only two ways to keep him from flyin' away with us. The first is to feed him to the sharks and the second is to treat him like a long-lost brother. I know he ought to be hove overboard, but I ain't got the heart to kill him in cold blood. Consequently, we got to let the villain live, an' if you go to beatin' him up, Mac, you'll make him sore an' he'll peach on us when we get to Honolulu. If us three could get back to San Francisco with clean hands, I'd say lick the beggar an' lick him for fair. But we got to remember that this mate was one o' the original filibuster crew o' the old Maggie I. The day we tackled the Mexican navy an' took this power schooner away from 'em, we put ourselves forty fathom plumb outside the law, an' this mate was present an' knows it. We've changed the vessel's name an' rig, an' doctored up the old Maggie's papers to suit the Maggie II, an' we've give her a new dress. But at that, it's hard to disguise a ship in a live port, an' the secret service agents o' the Mexican government may be a-layin' for us in San Francisco; and with this here mate agin us an' ready to turn state's evidence, we're pirates under the law, an' it don't take much imagination to see three pirates swagin' from the same yard-arm. No, sir, Mac. I ain't got no wish, now that we're fixed nice an' comfortable with the world's goods, to be hung for a pirate in the mere shank o' my youth. Why, I ain't fifty year old yet."

SALT WATER MORE BUOYANT

Fact That Is Well Known to Mariners May Be News to Some of Our Readers.

A boy dropped a ball into a small hole and could not get it out, so he poured water into the hole, thinking the ball would float to the surface. As the ball was slightly heavier than the water it remained on the bottom. Then the boy thought of mixing salt with the water, since he knew salt water would float heavier objects than fresh water would. He tried this and was rewarded with the floating ball.

This particular fact is demonstrated at the mouths of rivers. Objects rolling along the bottom of a river, too heavy to come to the top, will rise when carried out to sea. The rule also applies to boats. A ship with a cargo on the sea will sink sometimes a foot or two on entering a fresh water port. If she leaves the port with her cargo, she will rise on entering the ocean. For that reason a ship may be loaded apparently too heavily at a pier and still be all right on the waves.

In building a dam, the fact of salt water's being heavier than fresh must be remembered.—Kansas City Star.

SOME PEOPLE PREFER TABLETS

Pepto-Mangan Is Sold in Liquid and Tablets—the Same Medicinally.

The famous blood builder, Gude's Pepto-Mangan, can be had in tablet form, as well as in liquid. Some people prefer Pepto-Mangan tablets to the liquid. They are put up in a convenient package. There are people who take the liquid Pepto-Mangan at home morning and night, and take the tablets at noon time.

Medicinally the liquid and the tablet form of Gude's Pepto-Mangan are the same. Any druggist can supply this well-known blood builder. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years. It restores the blood to its normal healthy state by increasing the number of red cells. Men, women and children who are run down, weak, pale and sickly, regain normal health by helping the blood to get back its strength. Look for the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" on the package. DO YOU SLEEP?

When You're Nervous, Weak, and Thin, Take this Woman's Advice.

Moundsville, W. Va.—"Some years ago in the opening of Spring I began to go down in health. I became nervous, weak, could not eat nor sleep, and became very thin. Was so completely run-down I could not work. I went on this way one whole summer. I took medicine but it did me no good. I was so weak I could scarcely get up and down stairs, when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I only took about three bottles when I was a well person and began to eat and sleep. I gained thirty pounds in weight and am today strong and have never had any sickness since."—Mrs. M. J. Wilson, 713 First St., Write Dr. Pierce, Pres. Invalids' Hotel, in Buffalo, N. PAYS MULTITUDE OF DEBTS

When It Is Sent Out of Town, However, to Pay for What Can Be Bought at Home It Is Gone Forever.

(Copyright.)

It is a rather wonderful thing, when you stop to think about it what one lone dollar will do, if it is kept at work. This has been illustrated in a striking manner on several occasions by means of a very simple experiment. If you want to see just how important a role a silver dollar or a dollar bill plays in the life of a community here is the way to do it. Just attach a tag to the dollar and turn it loose, with the request that every person who receives the dollar make a note on the tag as to how he received it. The result will be an eye-opener.

Here is the way it works: Smith, the lumber dealer, who first possesses the dollar, buys some groceries from Brown and pays for them with the dollar. About that time Jones, the plumber, who had done some work for Brown, sends his collector around and Brown pays the bill with this dollar. Jones owes Green, the printer, a small advertising bill, so he sends this dollar with possibly some others, to Green to pay his bill. Green had just put the dollar in his cash drawer when in comes Black, the milkman, to whom Green owes a dollar for milk delivered at his house. Green takes the dollar out of his cash drawer and pays Black. For some time Black has owed White, the carpenter, for some work done on his dairy house, so now he takes the dollar that Green has paid him and pays up what he owes White. White still owes for some lumber that he bought from Smith, the lumber dealer, so he takes the dollar and squares up his account with Smith. Smith now has his dollar back. Brown has been able to pay his plumbing bill, Jones has squared up with the printer, and so on, all around the circle.

What Might Have Happened.

Now suppose that Smith, instead of buying his groceries from Brown, had purchased them from a mail order house in a far distant city and sent his dollar to pay for them. Brown would not have had that dollar to pay Jones,
